PREFACE

AT the annual meeting of the Samuel Bissell Memorial Library Association, February 22, 1913, it was decided to undertake the publication of A History of Twinsburg, to be issued in connection with the Centennial to be held in 1917. The entire matter was placed in charge of a committee of five which organized with Mr. Chauncey B. Lane as chairman, Miss Eliza P. Reed, secretary, Messrs. R. B. Chamberlin and W. S. Lister, in charge of finances, and Miss Lena M. Carter, historian. Rev. R. T. Cross was chosen genealogist.

It was never expected that the task would be unattended with difficulties. Many perplexing problems have presented themselves, some of which are as yet unsolved. The willingness of both former and present citizens to assist financially, and also in furnishing necessary data, has been greater than it seemed wise to hope. It has developed that many records, supposedly existent, have disappeared. Consequently some subjects are treated generally rather than in detail, since even the most painstaking investigation cannot supply such a lack in a work involving the occurrences of a century.

An attempt has been made to meet the desires of the different persons who may read this book. There are not a few who made their homes in Twinsburg many years ago who may desire in these pages to live over the old days, to renew acquaintance with friends long forgotten and to pass on to their posterity an enduring account of the events of years long past. There is this generation, some of whom are descendants of the early settlers, some of later advent here, and others who know of Twinsburg only as the home of their ancestors. To those who know the present town the process by which it has evolved from the past possesses much of interest. And there are those of future generations whose unquestionable right it is to know what of character and endeavor have been incorporated in their inheritance from the century just now gone by.

The life and work of Rev. Samuel Bissell are given rather lengthy treatment, both because of the real worth of the man and his mission, and also because of the renown given the town through his work. Furthermore, as the publication of this book has been assumed by the Samuel Bissell Memorial Library Association, it has seemed fitting that proper recognition should be rendered Rev. Mr. Bissell in these pages.

Another difficulty confronting the committee was the selection of illustrations. The necessarily limited number of persons, buildings and natural scenes here portrayed were selected because it was thought they would merit the interest of the living and, also, of future generations. It was deemed wise to insert few pictures of the living. Against his earnest protest the committee voted to insert the picture of the chairman.

Acknowledgment is gladly made of the value to the writer of the published accounts of early life in the town prepared by Mr. Ethan Alling and Mr. Luman Lane. Mr. Samuel A. Lane's History of Summit County has also been very helpful. The opportunity is here taken to express gratitude to all who have contributed material and, in several instances, an entire chapter toward this book. Among contributors not elsewhere named are Mrs. W. C. Prentiss, Mrs. A. J. Brown, Mrs. E. B. Crouse, A. W. Elliott and Dr. R. B. Chamberlin. In addition to these are the many who have freely given valuable information, often, after much exacting research. Numberless times the many years and the active memory of Mr. Oscar A. Nichols, Twinsburg's third oldest man, have been proven of high value.

Undoubtedly many inaccuracies will be discovered notwithstanding the fact that many items have been omitted because of lack of reasonable verification. No effort has been made, nor needed to be made, to give more praise to Twinsburg's citizens than is their just due. The writer entertains the feeling that if error has been made it has been in withholding rather than adding expressions of commendation.

If, after having read this book, the reader shall have a warmer feeling of gratitude toward the pioneers and their successors, if he shall possess a better understanding of the business of making a thriving, respectable, law-abiding and progressive community, if he shall feel a keener sense of his responsibility as a citizen, the committee charged with the preparation of this book will feel its effort and labor have not been in vain.

SURROUNDED on all sides by hills, Twinsburg nestles comfortably in the little valley made by Tinker's creek. From above, it presents a pretty panorama of patches of green, gold, and dark brown, dotted with the black and white of houses and the red of barns, cut in all directions by the grayish-brown of the roads, while throughout the whole goes a winding path of willow-green along the serpentine course of the Tinker's. Here and there are tracts of woodland, in winter bleak and bare save for an occasional pine, in spring the brightest of greens, and turning to an artistic confusion of all colors under the witchery of fall.

That is the way it now appears. A hundred years ago the picture was changed. In place of red barns and modern houses were a few log cabins. The church-spires were not there to pierce the sky. Where now are pastures and fields of corn and grain, the forest was unbroken. Where now automobiles speed along brick pavement, a little trail wandered in and out among the trees.

Wild animals of all sorts were in abundance. The best authority that we have is Luman Lane, whose sketches give a good idea of the natural features of those early days. According to him the deer were so plentiful that they usually saw a number every day that they traveled in the woods. In the fall they were killed with some difficulty but in winter he says it was no uncommon thing for a hunter to bring down three or four in one day. Bears were rather common and used to kill the settlers' hogs in the woods. Wolves were frequently heard and their tracks often seen near houses. They caused a great deal of trouble by killing sheep. Luman Lane says in one place, "One night, my sheep not being safely shut up, I heard them howl as if they were rejoicing with full bellies. In the morning, on going to look at my sheep, found they had taken only four. This was not the only time they killed my sheep." Turkeys were quite numerous and their calls could be heard in all directions upon a still morning. A hunter would select one, go as near as possible, and then imitate the call of the hen turkey, the tom-turkey would usually come near enough to shoot. Hedgehogs were common. The dogs would bite them and get their mouths full of quills which had to be immediately drawn out. There were some wildcats but they stayed in the deep woods and as they did no damage little attention was paid to them. Rattlesnakes were plentiful. A large yellow spotted snake which sometimes measured eight or nine inches in circumference existed upon the high land and a small dark-colored "massa-sauga" upon the low land. There were no crows but great numbers of the larger ravens. We are told that the owls used to make a "hideous noise" in the night. The passenger pigeons were exceedingly abundant here. Henry Parmelee tells about their vast numbers in 1835. They would fly from the Aurora swamp, where they stayed at night, to the Northfield swamp, where they fed. Their flight so darkened the sky that chickens started for their roost. The flock was several miles wide and made such a roaring noise that one could not hear conversation ten feet away. The raccoons and black and grey squirrels destroyed considerable corn. Luman Lane says that he once saw fifty squirrels in five minutes. All of these animals were quite unafraid of man. Sometimes the felling of a tree would be answered by the howl of wolves and a deer would occasionally be browsing upon the same tree upon which a settler was chopping.

Times have changed. Such conditions no longer exist. With the clearing away of the woodland many animals, before common, disappeared. Wolves, bear, deer, and rattlesnakes are things of the past. Foxes, which Luman Lane speaks of carelessly, as if they were too common to mention, are now rare. No one has seen a passenger pigeon for twenty years. Crows have replaced the ravens and the only turkeys we now have are domesticated.

Yet nature's contributions to Twinsburg have not ceased. In fact, nowhere are her beauties better displayed. In birds, flowers, and beautiful landscape she is rich beyond all comparison. Imagine, if you can, a better field for a nature student than the Aurora Pond district. The ledges of rock at one side, the open marshy country surrounding, and the dense tamarack bog, with a few pines and spruces scattered here and there, and with ferns three or four feet high rising upon the trunks of dead trees crossing pools of stagnant water, form a naturalist's paradise. In winter the place is rather deserted save for an occasional grouse or quail and the hawks which slip silently through the bare tamaracks on the watch for prey. If it were not for the chickadees, nuthatches, and small woodpeckers the stillness would be oppressive. In the spring when the tamaracks again show their little bundles of green needles many migratory birds make it their temporary home. Tiny wood warblers, with plumage containing all colors of the rainbow, inhabit the treetops, visible only to keen eyes and a field glass. Out on the pond the ducks can be seen, now flying overhead from one woods to another, and now settling for a moment upon the surface of the water. About a half dozen species of sparrows haunt the open fields and the birds are innumerable in the thickets. Just to provide a note of discord, a flock of blackbirds can generally be heard. In early summer the vegetation in the swamp becomes very dense and provides excellent cover for the great number of ovenbirds, which are often heard but seldom seen. In late summer swarms of insects take possession and remain until fall.

Bird lovers will find some other places nearly as fruitful for observation as the Pond. A large woods crossing the Dell District road is full of life and upon an early spring morning Bissell's woods upon the Bedford road is teeming with all kinds of birds. Anyone who is deeply interested in this subject soon learns to know the local habits of the birds; that in a certain grove he is likely to find woodpeckers, in a certain thicket, thrushes, and so on. The writer has himself studied over sixty-five different species of birds in Twinsburg township and a more careful study might show over one hundred and fifty species present.

The ornithologist is by no means the only one who finds Twinsburg a profitable field for investigation. While a review of the local flora would be too lengthy to permit of space here, the possibilities are unlimited for original investigation along this line. Such places as the marshy ground near Aurora Pond present immense numbers of plants, both marine and terrestrial. A careful study of the grasses alone there would take many months. The chance for important finds of rare or new species is great. Several years ago some plants of the pink lady's slipper, a very rare orchid, were found there. And even the ordinary "posies" which we gather on a walk through the woods are of sufficient number and variety to interest, surprise, and confuse one.

Rock formations of many kinds exist here. The three series of ledges present an interesting field and the underlying strata of glacier-scratched rock form landmarks of which every resident has reason to be proud.

Such a survey shows that nature, while changing greatly during a century, has not done so for the worse. She remains today as wonderful and as sublime in her manifestations as in the days of Luman Lane. Throughout the course of a hundred years an invisible force has been selecting the strongest and the fittest of all forms of life, that only those might survive. The natural features which we have now in Twinsburg are not what have been left by the devastating hand of man, but instead the finest of all that have ever existed here. The trees, the flowers, and the birds which we behold are those which have been tested in the laboratories of the outdoors and found to be the best. So it is always with nature; she never stands still, never retrogrades, but ever progresses onward by a process of evolution which moves steadily toward the ideal.

We may love nature and her forms today as much as or more than the naturalists did ten decades ago. The passenger pigeon has gone but we bestow our affections upon the cardinal, a newcomer, and need feel no whit loser for the change. The call of the wild is stronger and more irresistible than ever. And in the glorious springtime,

"When beechen buds begin to swell
And woods the bluebird's warble know,"

he who holds close kinship with nature is drawn by an unseen longing to her bountiful domains, the woods and fields, to sit at her feet and hearken to her wisdom.

ETHAN ALLING

THE EARLY SETTLEMENT AT MILLSVILLE

TO those who know the natural advantages of Twinsburg it may seem strange that it was the last township in what is now Summit County to be settled. However, the settlements in the Connecticut Western Reserve were largely a matter of chance, as departures from the established lines of travel were attended with great hazards. Naturally the water courses and old Indian trails determined most of the earlier settlements. The nearest waterway of any consequence was several miles west of Twinsburg, and the old trails led farther north or south. This fact, and a certain clannishness prevalent in newly settled regions, probably, in large measure, account for the fact that not till 1817 did the hills and valleys we love resound with the ring of the homesteader's ax.

Back in Connecticut what we call Twinsburg was simply "Township Five in the Tenth Range" to the Connecticut Land Company, and as such was sold to several parties. Moses and Aaron Wilcox acquired the northern and northeastern portion, Henry Champion the western and northwestern part and Mills and Hoadley the southeastern part.

The most unusual feature in the early history of the town is the fact that the first settlement was made by a boy of only sixteen years, Ethan Alling. Fortunately we have available his own account of life in those early days. In 1860 he wrote as follows:

"I was born in Milford, (now Orange) Conn., five miles west of the city of New Haven, the 13th day of August, 1800. My father, Lewis Alling, was bred a farmer, but at my earliest recollection, was selling goods in New Haven, where he lent his name freely and suffered loss, as he afterwards told me. After his failure in the above business he took heavy jobs, building turnpike roads, etc., at the same time working a small stony farm and keeping a country tavern on the Derby Turnpike four miles west of New Haven. He was an industrious saving man but unfortunate in pecuniary matters. My mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Clark, died in New Haven, July 15, 1806, leaving two children, myself and brother Lewis, who was then about fifteen months old. From that time until my father re-married in 1809 (to Nancy Wheeler of Derby, Conn., who came and died with him in Ohio), I lived or stayed with my grandfather, uncles, etc., four miles from New Haven, and fared hard, not being much cared for by anybody. There was a school kept six months in the year about a mile from where I lived to which I was sent with my little basket containing my dinner and Webster's Easy Lesson Spelling Book, with instructions that if I passed any person older than myself to take off my hat and make a bow, rain or shine. This instruction was given at both ends of the road and its observance strictly required of all school children and youth in that day.

"In 1812 I had a severe sickness that made a cripple of me for more than a year and put an end to my school opportunities (which will account for my bad spelling and worse grammar), with the exception of studying the Surveyor's Art a few months in the fall of 1816. In the spring of 1814 my father got a situation for me in Loomis and Johnson's grocery store in New Haven, by paying my board the first year, where I stayed until the company failed in 1816. Young men now expect a large salary the first year and often get more than they can earn.

"In the winter of 1816-17 my father sold his farm and other property and took notes which he traded off (guaranteeing payment) to the amount of five thousand dollars to Mills and Hoadley for 1000 acres of land in Tract 3, Township No. 5, Range 10, Connecticut Western Reserve, which township they, after the above trade was made, called MILLSVILLE. A part of the notes were never paid, consequently we had but 400 acres of the land.

"On the 3rd day of March, 1817, I started for Ohio with three hired men, Zeri Alling, Rodolphus (called Tom) Wolcott and Lex Johnson. We had a muddy road all the way except one day's travel on the ice from Buffalo to Dunkirk, and arrived at Zina Post's in Hudson on the 31st day of March. Stayed over night and the next morning went to Esquire Gideon Mills with a letter of introduction from Isaac Mills, one of the firm from which we bought the land.

We took an early dinner with Esquire Mills and he started with us for the north town, as he called it, not having heard of its being named Millsville. From Wm. Chamberlin's we followed a line of marked trees, called Chagrin road until we came to the line of Tract No. 2 (afterwards known as the Wilcox tract), which Esquire Mills said was the center of the town. There we sat down under a beech site tree, which spot is now the exact S. E. corner of the Public Square. The lay of the land was uneven, a bad slough a few rods south of where we stopped, and nothing looked inviting to locate a village upon. We then took a southeasterly course up the creek to the falls (since called the Mills), where we found some sticks of hewed timber which had been drawn by the people of Hudson, and I believe Aurora, to build a sawmill. They had also put up a log cabin with one roof which we afterwards occupied. Thence we passed over the hill known now as the Hawkins' farm and returned to Esquire Mills'. Thus ended my first day in this town. We stayed two weeks with Esquire Mills and cleared off a piece of his old slashing to plant with corn upon shares, and in the meantime selected the hill above named to commence operations upon. Tract No. 3 had not yet been surveyed into lots but was surveyed that season by Samuel S. Baldwin, Esq., of Newburg, O. The question having often been asked why we preferred that spot to the center I will here give the reasons. First, there we found excellent plow and grass land, water, stone, timber, sugar trees, etc. Second, the water-power at the falls was the best for miles around, probably three times the water there then that there is now, and we believed that business would center there as it had centered at Middlebury and other places regardless of the centers; and I still think there would have been a smart village built up had not the owners, Mills and Hoadley, attempted a foolish speculation by laying out a village and asking from fifty to two hundred dollars apiece for lots containing less than one half an acre of land, thus shutting out mechanics, etc.

"On the 15th day of April we took bed and board in the shanty at the Falls. Our stock of provisions was a barrel of poor pork that I paid Capt. Oviatt twenty-five dollars for, one bbl. of flour, eight dollars, ten bushels of potatoes, five dollars, and one gallon of whiskey, $1.50. The latter being in those days, indispensable in the best of families had to soon be replenished. Our entire cooking utensils and furniture consisted of a bake kettle without a bail, two tin bake pans, one case knife, one iron spoon, and a board, two foot by six, that was got for a door to the shanty. Each one had a jack knife and provided himself with a sharp stick fork and a clean chip plate, every meal. With these I cooked and kept house for a family of from four to six and entertained lots of company. Ours being the only hotel in the place we had many hungry visitors and enjoyed life first rate.

“About the 20th of May Elisha Loomis and Lester Davis arrived from New Haven and stopped with us a part of the time; on the 31st of May Frederick Stanley arrived and on the 1st of July my brother Lewis, Gideon Thompson and Zenas Alling arrived with a drove of 104 Merino sheep, having driven them from Derby, Conn., to Hudson, O., 660 miles, in thirty days. On the 7th of July my father and mother, sister Elizabeth, then seven years old, Irena Thomas, afterwards wife of Luman Lane, Amos Cook Taylor, father of Timothy Taylor, now at Macedonia, and Wilson Whitticus, the colored boy (called Tone), arrived—making in all fifteen souls from our neighborhood in Conn. that had arrived to that date, July 7th, 1817. Two of these, however, Johnson and Davis, had returned to Connecticut.

“About the first of June we raised a log house; early the next spring (1818) we built a frame barn and in the fall of that year raised and partly finished a frame house. These were the three first buildings of their kind in the township. The sawmill was erected in 1817, the gristmill in 1818. Joel N. Thompson had a distillery in operation in 1821 at the spring where O. Appleby now lives.

“The average number of our family the first year was 14, mostly men; all lived and got along comfortably in a log house which had but two rooms, one below and one above, poorly chinked and not mudded at all; the fireplace without jambs calculated for wood 6 feet long. All were healthy and could eat three meals a day without inconvenience. Provisions were dear, except venison. In the fall of 1817 we paid for eight poorly fatted hogs, eight dollars a hundred. The meat of a good sized deer cost only from fifty cents to a dollar, or less than one cent a pound. Consequently we devoured many of these noble animals. Flour was eight dollars a barrel, salt ten dollars. Goods were still higher, $\frac{3}{4}$ cotton shirting was 50 cts. a yd., calico 75 cts., etc. With the best economy we could use our money was all gone before we could raise anything to sell and when that good time came (1819) money was scarce, produce was plenty and very low, wheat being fifty cents in trade, with other grain and meat in proportion. In the fall of that year I lent Oliver Brown of Hudson eight dollars in money for a few days. When I called for it he said he would deliver me twenty-four bushels of the best white seed wheat for the debt, and did so. Every prudent man stopped making contracts to pay money. Notes were given payable at a time and place, in cattle, grain, etc., at the market price, which was not understood to mean exactly what the article would fetch in money but less than the trade price. The price of chopping the timber on an acre of land, ready for logging was six dollars; chopping, clearing and fencing, twenty dollars. At which price Gideon Thompson, John L. Thompson and Nathaniel Palmer (known as the Twinsburgh Land Clearing Company) chopped, cleared, and fenced some eighty acres in 1819-20."

From another account we learn that Ezra Osborn arrived with his family July 1, 1817, but settled in the western part of the township. Mrs. Osborn has the distinction of being the first woman to be a settler in the town.

It is difficult after these hundred years to even imagine what of dissatisfaction with old conditions, yearnings for change, zest for adventure, sense of duty and other sentiments prompted the migrations of these pioneers, but it is certain they must have been men and women of strong faith, untiring energy, and a great hope.

THE NEW TOWNSHIP OF TWINSBURG

THE reader has already learned that the north and northeast portion of "Township 5" were drawn by Moses and Aaron Wilcox. At that time they were merchants in Killingworth, Conn. Born May 11, 1770, at North Killingworth, Conn., they had been educated in the same school had engaged in business together, had married sisters (Huldah and Mabel Lord of Killingworth) at the same time, and held their property in common. Though they did not personally visit their Ohio property till 1823, in 1819 they made an arrangement with the settlers to name the town. For this privilege they donated six acres of land for a public square and twenty dollars toward the erection of a school-house. As they did not own the land covering the exact center of the township they set aside six acres adjacent to it. In naming the town they evidenced their oneness in feeling and called it TWINSBURG.

At their store in Killingworth they had for inspection by possible purchasers a map of the lots in their tract in Twinsburg, made by Jos. Darrow, also a description of each lot and a plan of the settlement at Millsville. In the spring of 1820 they sent Elijah W. Bronson to Twinsburg to act as their agent. On the east side of the square he erected a log house which was the first building at the center. In the fall of 1820 he brought his wife and Samuel Hull to Twinsburg.

In 1823 the Wilcox twins came to Twinsburg. For a time they lived by themselves in a blacksmith shop that had belonged to Oliver Clark. It stood on the lot where the bank now stands. This was a temporary arrangement as that year they built on the same lot the first frame house erected at the center.

In the spring of 1819 there were enough voters in the town to effect a township organization. The commissioners of Portage county issued a proclamation and the first election was held in April, 1819. Frederick Stanley was elected clerk and other officers were chosen. It appears that Lewis Alling and Frederick Stanley were elected justices of the peace, but later it was learned that it was necessary to have an order from the court to appoint justices. The next fall

Lewis Alling and Samuel Vail were elected and commissioned as justices of the peace. In 1820 Elisha Loomis was made clerk, in 1821 Elijah W. Bronson, and in 1822 Luman Lane.

In 1819 occurred the first death in the township, that of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Chamberlain. On the 23rd of November, Maria Stanley, afterward the wife of Rev. Mr. Burton, was born, being the first white child born in Twinsburg. There were no weddings till March 19, 1821, when Eliza Dodge was married to Emery Alger by Esquire Alling.

In November, 1820, Luman Lane and Hanford White came to Twinsburg. In 1860 Mr. Lane wrote a historical sketch covering the forty years he had lived in the town. The present generation is under great obligation to Mr. Lane for his work. He recorded the following as being men of 21 years or more when he arrived here: Emery Alger, Samuel Alger, Lewis Alling, William Allin, N. S. Barnet, John Basset, Henry Bennet, E. W. Bronson, Reuben Chamberlain, Oliver Clark, — Darling, — Davis, John Dodge, Cyrus Hodskin, Isaiah Humphrey, Roman Humphrey, Nester Hurlbut, Leonard Kilborn, Cotton Leech, Levi Leech, Elisha Loomis, Elias W. Mather, Josiah Myric, Noah P. Nichols, Ezra Osborn, N. J. Palmer, — Perkins, Preston Pond, Lyman Richmond, — Sawyer, Frederick Stanley, Amos C. Taylor, Joel W. Thompson, Orrin Tucker, Asa Upson, Edwin B. Vail, Homer G. Vail, Samuel Vail.

Instead of holding their lots about the square at speculative prices the Wilcox brothers sold them at very low figures and, as an inducement to tradesmen and mechanics to settle here, actually gave them lots for homes and shops. As a consequence of this wise policy within five or six years there were from twelve to fifteen families living near the square. In 1823 a post office was established with Moses Wilcox as postmaster.

In September, 1827, the Wilcox twins died within a few hours of each other. They were taken ill on the same day, of the same disease, and were buried in the same grave. Their death at this time, when money was becoming exceedingly scarce, caused a cessation of improvements in the northern part of town and this condition continued several years, but was finally relieved.

To the present generation there is somewhat of glamour in the life of the pioneers. To be sure, there was freedom from some of the tiresome exactions of today, and some of the strain of the twentieth century was absent, but there were hardships little imagined today. It was a time when the race was to the strong.

There was first the breaking of home ties and then the difficulty in reaching Twinsburg. A few had horses, more had oxen, but many made the trip from Connecticut on foot. Of his trip Luman Lane wrote: "We traveled on foot, bringing our packs upon our backs, from Killingworth, Conn. The last day we traveled forty-six miles. We came in what was called the Wheadon road, and saw no house between Newburgh and Twinsburgh, but was told there was one in Bedford a little way from the road. The small bushes were cut, but it was difficult to keep the road as it was in the evening. The bridge was built across Tinker's creek at the center of Bedford, but it was with difficulty we found it. On arriving at Mr. Bronson's we found Jesse Pratt, who had arrived a few days before with a team of a yoke of oxen and a horse. Joshua Post came in company with him, with an ox team to Northfield. Orin Tucker came with Mr. Post, Mr. Tucker having married Mr. Post's daughter and having been here in the spring and gone back to Saybrook."

When the weary travelers reached Twinsburg the place looked little as it does today. Forests covered most of the ground. They were not well kept groves but dense woods choked with underbrush. The log cabin was usually erected on a little plot of cleared ground and more land cleared as opportunity allowed. Many settlers planned to clear a certain number of acres of timber land each year. Only the very best of the timber was saved. A most casual glance at the sturdy construction of the older buildings in the town shows us something of the lavishness with which good timber was used. What today would be called first class trees were felled and often burned to get them out of the way. Mr. Lane wrote: "The first summer I was in town, after harvest, there was a logging-bee nearly every day, except the Sabbath, till sowing time. Sometimes it was as much as one could do to carry whiskey and water to the others in the field. Raisings of log houses and log barns were very frequent. The whiskey bottle always passed freely around. When we began to raise buildings without whiskey there was violent opposition." So thick were the woods that it was not safe for the uninitiated to venture far from home as these incidents related by Mr. Lane prove: "People were frequently lost in the woods and sometimes remained out over night. A man once told me he lay in the woods north-east of my house. He said when night came on he tried to make a fire with his gun, lost his knife, failed to make a fire, and remained there till morning.

"I once, while boiling sap in the woods half a mile from any house, heard a person call. I answered. It was before the setting of the sun. The call advanced nearer and nearer until it began to grow dark. I thought it was not a man and, having heard panther stories, began to be afraid. My fears were increased by its taking a circuitous route after I knew it must have seen the fire. I took my ax, passed cautiously out among the bushes, determined if a panther should spring upon me to give one good blow with the edge. I saw something and spoke. It answered. I found it was Mrs. Bull, the mother of Lorenzo Bull, of Solon. She had gone out to bring in the sheep. I accompanied her to the house and Hanford White went with her to Mr. Bull's. They had just commenced making a search for her.

"Prof. Nutting, of Western Reserve College, when going to Solon to preach once became lost in the woods or swamp southeast of the center of Solon and remained there with his horse till morning. He laid his saddle on his feet to keep them from freezing.

"One time a little before night I heard a person call. I answered. It was the wife of Reuben Henry. She was going directly towards Solon where probably she must have remained over night in the woods as it was six miles to the nearest neighbor in that direction."

Other dangers lurked in the forests. Wild animals were far too prevalent for safety. Again we quote from Mr. Lane: "One evening in Nov., 1821, while living alone in the woods, I went to my nearest neighbor, Aaron Post's house. When I came out to go home we heard a dog bark some way off in the woods. We went to him, cut down a tree and killed a coon. The dog ran off but soon barked again. We went to him, saw a bear upon a tree forty or fifty feet from the ground, the moon shining at that time. A man went for a rifle and shot the bear.

“One day, as I was hunting a few rods west of Aaron Post’s house, I heard dogs bark near me, they having treed a bear. I soon heard two guns, went to them and found a number of men and dogs fighting a wounded bear. One gun was then discharged near the head of the bear. It did not hit him, but he was soon killed. Here I had an opportunity to see with what ease and dexterity a bear can use its fore-legs and feet.”

Wolves were often heard and their tracks seen near dwellings, and many herds of sheep suffered from their depredations. Rattlesnakes were numerous. The low lands were infested with the small, dark colored massasauga. It is told that in 1831 Mr. Luman Lane was bitten on the foot by one, that his hired man opened the wound with his jack knife and sucked the poison out. Mr. Lane suffered the loss of much blood before the nearest physician, Dr. Town of Hudson, could give attention to his wound, and suffered from it more or less during later life.

The very early homes were crude indeed. Made of logs, with one room below and a loft above, they frequently sheltered large families. A huge fireplace generously supplied with logs was usually the only attractive feature indoors. Sometimes the entire floor was planked, again only one corner making a place for laying the beds. Doubtless Twinsburg suffered such poor housing a shorter period of time than did the neighboring towns since it was settled later and had a sawmill in operation almost from the first.

Conveniences in the home there were none. A meager supply of heavy cooking utensils and the ubiquitous spinning-wheel gave ample employment to the wife and daughters. There was soap to be made in generous quantities, fruits to be dried, candles to be dipped, flax and wool to be spun, woven, sometimes dyed, and made into garments for the family. All sewing was done by hand and long stitches were considered disgraceful.

Good health was usual, but those who settled near Loomis’ Mills in 1822-3 suffered severely from “bilious, intermittent and typhus fever,” scarcely an adult living within a mile of the pond, made by damming the waters of Tinker's creek, escaped an attack, and not more than two of forty or more years recovered. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Alling succumbed and were buried in the same grave, Sept. 7, 1823. The death of Mr. Alling was keenly felt by the community.

It was a time when sickness was greatly to be dreaded. Medical attention was difficult to obtain, Drs. Israel Town and Oliver Mills of Hudson being the chief dependence in times of sickness. Though far apart the people were truly neighborly. Every one had the freedom of his neighbor's house, and when sickness or trouble came the neighbors, as a matter of course, did what was possible to alleviate pain and sorrow, even to the point of frequently transmitting infection to their own households. It is true our grandmothers had a considerable knowledge of the medicinal qualities of the common herbs and were skillful in their application in cases of sickness or accident. But it is also true that many and many a home was saddened by the intrusion of the grim reaper when just a little attention from a well-trained physician might have given the forces of life and health the victory. The dangers from infection and contagion were little understood and much absolutely needless sickness and suffering were endured. The mortality among the infants tells its own sad story of the difficulties and the tragedies of pioneer life.

Those were times when men had time and opportunity to make the acquaintance of their real selves; to think long and decide wisely. The work necessary to be done before the early settlers could expect to be comfortable was helpful in preventing them from feeling their loneliness too acutely. Probably the summers were fairly pleasant but the long winter months, before the roads were well defined and social life well established, must surely have tried their souls.

But the greatest hardship to the settlers was the scarcity of supplies and the lack of money. Of course there soon was corn, wheat, vegetables and maple sugar of their own production. But salt, tea, and, in fact, almost everything else had to be obtained from neighboring towns or points farther away. Transportation was very difficult and money exceedingly scarce. The needs of the people kept in advance of their resources. Coarse three-fourths woollen cloth cost three dollars a yard, lead was twenty-five cents per pound, nails one shilling per pound, and poor at that. Mr. Lane's experience was not so very unusual: "After I got to Twinsburgh I wanted an ax to work with. I went to Hudson through the mud to buy one. I got one by paying two dollars and a quarter. I then ground it; in a few hours I broke it. Then I went to Newburgh, bought a piece of steel (the road being mostly through the woods), then to Hudson to get it put on the ax; then ground the ax—it failed again; bought another—that failed; got it fixed again. We used to go to Capt. Alger's to grind; he lived where Nelson Upson now does. I then wrote to my father in Connecticut to send me two axes, which he did by Aaron Post who came to Twinsburgh July 27, 1821. A chopper would chop an acre for an ax which he knew was good. The price of chopping an acre was six dollars."

As produce became more plentiful the price lowered and money became even more difficult to obtain. Notes were given payable in stock or produce, due at some future day. A number who had purchased farms and agreed to pay six or seven dollars an acre for them found they could not pay, and left the township. Some of these farms with all the improvements upon them were afterwards sold for three dollars an acre. In 1825 butter made in Twinsburg sold for eight cents per pound, and cheese for five. Of course many failed to meet their obligations at the time agreed upon. It is told of Esq. Hudson that in 1828, when meeting with some disappointment in such a matter, he said, "It would take as many Twinsburgh men to make a reliable man as humming birds to make a tom-turkey." However, most of the obligations were met in full a little later.

We would expect that a town settled largely by Connecticut folk would not long be content without a church or school. A log schoolhouse was erected on the square in 1822. How the expense, save the twenty dollars from the Wilcox twins, was met we do not know. It was the first public building in the town. About this time the newly formed Congregational Society agreed to build on the square a two story house, the lower to be used for a school and the upper for church services. The plan did not meet with general favor as here appears:

“Twinsburgh, Feb. 3d, 1823.

At a meeting legally warned and held at the school-house, in the center of s'd town—voted, that the public square shall remain unoccupied by any public buildings at present.

Luman Lane, Clerk.”

Evidently the word present was interpreted literally for after an interval of time a one story house was erected. It was moved twice and then torn down. The first school teacher in town was Lavina Merriam who later married Junia North. It is said that “people frequently went to meeting with ox teams; their clothes not very good, sometimes much patched, and in summer the men were sometimes barefoot.”

It is a matter of record that the first captain of the military company was Elisha Loomis, the second Joseph Myrick and the third Asa Upson. While Asa Upson was captain, probably about 1823, arrangements were made for the company to march from the center to his father, Saul Upson's place, and take dinner in his new frame barn. With the idea of having some diversion on the way a subordinate officer was given liberty to select a number of men who should go on ahead and act as Indians. After giving the “Indians” time to get well ahead the remainder of the company proceeded on the march. Though they kept a sharp lookout nothing was seen of the enemy. They began to wonder what could have happened to the “redskins” when suddenly the latter sprang from ambush, seized the captain before he could use his sword, and in less than half a minute the well formed company resembled a flock of sheep scared by wolves. By the time the barn was reached the few prisoners had obtained their liberty. Of course, Capt. Upson and his men were the subjects of much raillery from the victorious braves, but we are told that both friend and foe did ample justice to the dinner of roast pig, turkey, chicken pies, and countless other good things.

The later history of the military company is not positively known. It is certain that Horace Norton and James Brown were captains sometime in the early forties. Mr. A. J. Brown has in his possession the commission received by his father, James Brown, in which he is promoted to the Lieutenant Colonelship of the 1st I. Reg., 3rd Brigade, 20th Division of the Militia of Ohio. It is dated Jan. 4, 1844, and signed by Wilson Shannon, Gov., and W. S. Wane, Sec. of State. The commission was for seven years, but not long after its issuance the militia law was repealed. Another captain was George Dodge. His rifle is now in the possession of his son, Albert Dodge. The captain's dress consisted of a blue suit, with brass buttons and epaulets, and a long white feather in the hat. He wore a sword and Capt. Brown had also a bass drum.

For many years the public square was anything but beautiful, though freely used. The northeastern part was swampy and on the northern portion of the west side there was a spring from which several near-by families obtained water. A goodly number of the present citizens can remember having drawn water from the well near that spot. The square was not fenced and animals roamed at will over it.

Social privileges were such as were common to all new settlements. A six hundred mile trip into new territory is somewhat of a leveler, since the man with considerable possessions can not well bring them with him and, to a certain degree, must manage much as does the man having little. Most of the heads of families were comparatively young men and their only hope of success here lay in their ability to work. They most certainly had never failing opportunities to exercise that ability. When they were not busy with their crops there were new buildings to be erected, various improvements waiting to be made, and always the forest to be cleared. Knowing they must work or fail, with true Yankee ingenuity and pluck, they managed to take their pleasure and relaxation in performing their work. Hence the logging bees, the husking bees, the paring bees and raisings. Even hunting and fishing combined pleasure with necessity. At these gatherings the women congregated and prepared the necessary viands and, according to all reports, it was no small task. On account of their small homes the women found it necessary to have their quilting bees. With a true spirit of adaptability they managed to put much of cheer into their necessary hardships.

Clothing was coarse and made to withstand hard wear rather than for adornment. The men generally wore buckskin trousers as they were more durable than any other kind when working in the woods. Women's and children's clothes were of home manufacture. It was no little task, in addition to all her other duties, for the housewife to prepare the cloth and garments for the usual good-sized family. It does not seem strange to us that so many mothers laid down their burdens before middle age was reached.

Notwithstanding their privations and hardships the pioneers struggled on, performing their daily tasks with fidelity, planning improvements, ever hoping for better things. It is not at all improbable that they enjoyed life as well as the average person does today. Under difficulties a less sturdy people would have found insuperable they laid the foundation for a superior moral and intellectual life. We of today owe them a debt of gratitude because they kept their ideals through the stress of pioneer life.

NOTE—So many of the settlers of Twinsburg, including the Wilcox brothers, came from Killingworth, Conn., that it may be of interest to know more concerning the place. It is situated in Middlesex Co. and was settled in 1663. It was first called Hammonnasset, then Kenilworth, and finally Killingworth. The township is thirteen miles in length from north to south and about three miles in width. It is about twenty-five miles east of New Haven, and about one thousand acres on Long Island Sound is a salt marsh. There are two parishes, Killingworth and North Killingworth, the latter being rough and stony.

It is possible, but not certain, that Longfellow's poem, "Birds of Killingworth," was based on a crusade once made there against several kinds of birds. There was much slaughter and few birds remained.

Yale College was chartered Oct. 1701. Saybrook was decided upon as its location and Rev. Abraham Pierson, settled pastor at Killingworth, chosen as its first rector, or president. His people would not consent to his removal and until his death in 1707 the students and library were at Killingworth, while the commencements were held at Saybrook.

AN ERA OF PROSPERITY

IT is both natural and right to expect harvest after seedtime. It was the lure of harvest that drew the pioneers to the Western Reserve. They came planted, watered, and waited; but not long. The country was new, hard labor was freely bestowed, and results were bound to follow. The pioneers found here fertile land, a diversified soil, timber, waterways and free-stone. The question was how to turn these natural resources into "earthly goods." It was soon seen that the difficulty would be that of securing good markets rather than that of production. With no railroads and poor highways the matter was serious. In 1825 Mr. Alling took butter to Akron where the canal locks were being constructed and sold it for eight cents per pound. In 1828 he bought the stage-line, thus transferring to Twinsburg the route from the old Cleveland to Pittsburg road through Northfield. He had also built a tavern at the center in 1826. With a stage line through the town this tavern now did a good business, furnishing a local market for considerable produce. In 1833 about one thousand dollars worth of dairy products were disposed of outside the township. By this time, after some costly experience, the people had a good understanding as to what they could raise and market profitably, and planned accordingly. Contact with people from other localities, and a tri-weekly mail gave them some idea of the demands they might reasonably hope to be called upon to meet.

Probably the most prosperous twenty-five years of the town's life were those between 1835 and 1860. The census reports give the population in 1833 as 670 (or 607), in 1850 as 1281 and in 1860 as 1138.

Those who remember the town as it was previous to 1860 tell us there have since been many changes. Then, at the center all was activity. The prosperity in the surrounding country, the Twinsburg Institute with its hundreds of students and the stage-line were the predominating factors in this condition. The activity at the center was a reflection of the progress throughout the township. At that time the net profits from agriculture were greater, in proportion to the labor expended, than they have been since. The soil was at its best, labor was cheap, the outlay for machinery was negligible and the standards of living were on a less expensive plane. Consequently the man who prospered had money with which to build substantial buildings, to invest, or lay away for the eventide of life.

Yet travel was difficult. What are now nearby cities were then reached only after hours of wearisome travel. As a consequence the busy matron only infrequently went farther from home than to the center. Occasionally the farmer would take a load of produce to Cleveland or Akron and bring back some supplies in bulk. But articles of lesser importance, but much more frequently purchased, were obtained at the center.

Some understanding of conditions throughout the township during this era may be gained from a list of business, mechanical and professional men in Twinsburg in 1860. At that time S. H. Bishop and Son, A. L. Nelson and Co., Hart, Stevens and Co., Osmon Riley, and James Hill were dealers in dry goods. Andrews and Ingersol sold groceries and produce, Edward Crouse dealt in stoves and tinware, while John and Peter Madden were merchant tailors. Elmore Clark was hotel keeper at that time. J. W. Harlow and J. P. Garzee were blacksmiths; James Alexander and Albert Upson were carriage makers; C. O. Stimson made harness. There were four shoemakers: Henry Livingston, Eli Holmes, Nelson Hinkston and Lot Griffith. Of carpenters and joiners there were William Clark, T. F. Riley, David Riley, Robt. Powers and Edwin Barber. John Williams is named as a cabinet maker, Frederick Stanley as a mason, and Eli Thompson and A. C. Doan are called stone masons. Chas. Bock and Jos. Isler were coopers. J. W. Fessenden is named as the only artist in town.

The spiritual welfare of the community was watched over by Revs. Kennedy, Bryant, and Henderson, who preached each Sunday in well filled churches. The sick were cared for by four physicians: J. G. Stearns, S. A. Collins, A. P. Clark, and S. A. Freeman.

At this time the Twinsburg Institute was housed in the old building at the southeast corner of the square. In the late fifties the attendance showed some decrease, though not much. About three-fourths of the out-of-town students boarded in the homes about the center. Water from the springs nearby had been piped to the Institute and many homes.

In the early fifties the stage-line was discontinued. The mail was then brought daily from Macedonia. In 1860, A. L. Nelson was postmaster. The opening of the Cleveland and Pittsburg R. R. through Macedonia in 1851 caused much traffic on the west road and accordingly reduced that on the Cleveland road.

Even so late as 1860 the square was still a common. People drove across at will with whatever vehicles they chanced to possess. Some attempts at grading had been made. In 1851 Zeno Parmelee received about three hundred dollars for labor on the grounds, but as yet it was barren of trees.

Away from the center the town was more closely settled than now. The log houses had mostly been replaced by frame and, sometimes, stone houses. These new homes usually sheltered good sized families. At that time houses were constructed with regard for durability, not convenience as now understood. There was usually a fairly large cellar, none too well lighted, with a dirt floor. Here were kept the winter's supply of vegetables and fruits, the pickles, preserves, cider, vinegar, and soft soap. The glass fruit jar was almost unknown. Fruits were usually dried or made into thick preserves, though some were canned in stone or glass bottles, being sealed with red sealing wax. Usually, though not always, stairs of some description led to the first floor.

Here might be found a kitchen, pantry, sitting-room, one or two bedrooms, and a "square" room. The kitchen generally served also as dining-room and was uncarpeted. The whiteness of the floor determined the reputation of the housewife in the neighborhood. In the earliest houses there were sometimes huge brick ovens built in the kitchen. In those homes baking day was an event, and a not very popular one with the boy whose task it was to bring the wood, good hickory preferred, to heat the oven. But those who partook of the Indian bread, baked pork and beans, and other toothsome articles of food cooked in these ovens, say the results justified the labor. Nevertheless, they were superseded by the "elevated oven" type of cook stove, more convenient and with a less voracious appetite for good wood. Tables were of the drop-leaf pattern and when they proved inadequate to the occasion resource was had to good long boards. Chairs were of wood and constructed for hard service. Cooking utensils were of iron. Copper and pewter had some special uses. The dishes were heavy and ordinarily had all-over decorations in gray, blues, or brown. There might have been carefully put out of harm's way some choice china, but it seldom saw service. Even the glassware was of heavy design. Steel knives and forks were in use, the best ones having choice handles. German silver was often used in spoons, though good solid silver spoons were frequent. Considerable ingenuity was frequently exercised in secreting these same spoons when the mistress desired to go away from home. Many matrons always took their spoons with them when leaving the house unoccupied for the day. The table napery was not infrequently of home manufacture. The fare was plain but would not today be called inexpensive. Vegetables were home-grown and meats home-cured. For fresh meats poultry was freely used, or the farmer would kill a sheep or pig. He sometimes shared this fresh meat with a neighbor who would later repay him in kind. Both corn and wheat were freely used in breads. In those days the farmer took grain to mill and returned with flour. The "patent process" was not invented and all of the kernel of wheat was used in some form. Salt rising bread was common and the yeast cake unknown. Fruits were used largely in the dried form. Apples and small fruits were fair and free from worms. Some years peaches were as plentiful as apples and large quantities would be left unpicked. Maple sugar or dark brown sugar was commonly used, white sugar being classed as a luxury. With plenty of eggs, milk, cream, home-made butter and cheese the cooks of those days made an enviable reputation for themselves in spite of many adverse circumstances. It is not inconceivable that the conveniences of the up-to-date kitchen might confuse the matron of olden times fully as much as the make-shifts of those days would handicap the housekeeper of the present day.

Although lard and kerosene lamps were introduced, the tallow candle was the chief reliance for artificial light during this period. Once the candles were made by the process of dipping the wicks repeatedly in tallow, but candle molds later came into use to the joy of the busy housekeeper. The earlier lanterns were of perforated tin, and later, four-sided glass ones were used. With both the tallow candle furnished the light. It was the custom to caution the scholars who attended the spelling schools to be sure to bring their candles. These candles were inserted in blocks of wood about four inches square. A short narrow board with a hole bored near the upper end was nailed to the block, and this wall candle hung on a nail in the schoolroom.

For reasons not now seeming reasonable there was frequently a step from the kitchen into the next room. The sitting-room floor was covered with a rag carpet and furnished for comfort, but the front, or best, room was for appearance's sake only. It might boast a "store" carpet, have cane-seated or horsehair chairs and a few other furnishings, but it was kept darkened, being opened to be swept and dusted, and was used only for very special occasions, such as funerals, pastoral visitations and weddings.

The bedrooms were commonly very small, but what the rooms lacked in size was more than offset by the voluminous feather beds found therein. The number and quality of goose feather beds in a housewife's possession was an indication of her thrift and prosperity. It was not uncommon to give each daughter a feather bed and pair of pillows when she was beginning housekeeping in her own home. Bed-springs were unthought of, all the bedsteads being corded.

Fireplaces were commonly built in the houses but in their absence large box stoves were used. These were also used in the schools and churches.

Wall paper was used very little, whitewash being universally used. Sand, whitewash and soft soap were the cleansers of that era. Windows were composed of small panes of glass, anything larger was supposed to be certain to break too easily for practical use.

The housewife was almost sure to have stored safely away a goodly supply of herbs for use in case of sickness, and not infrequently her skill at such times was proved to be of unusual quality.

Close by or adjoining the house there was often a milk house, or room, which was the scene of much activity. A smokehouse, granary and one or more barns, without basements, completed the array of buildings. There was almost no machinery, nearly all kinds of farm work being done with simple tools.

The farms were composed of small fields fenced with rails, the garden often being enclosed with pickets. Even the gardens differed from those of the present. Tomatoes were by many considered harmful and the smaller vegetables were little known. Much use was made too of the smaller fruits. Wild berries were cultivated by many. The location of many an old home is marked now by a few stones and a lonely currant bush.

Love of the beautiful found expression in the culture of flowers and shrubs. Perennials were favorites but other flowers demanding more work and time were not neglected. Lilacs, snow-balls, cinnamon roses, holly hocks, bleeding hearts, tiger lilies, peonies, four o'clocks, tulips, larkspur, poppies, daffodils, jonquils and many, many others had admiring friends. The lawns of today were only door yards in those busy times.

Water was obtained from wells or springs. Where cisterns were in use they were often made of oak planks, as were most of the drains not left open. Great efforts were made to keep everything about the home clean and wholesome. Dirt was considered a disgrace but, unfortunately, everything detrimental to health was not classed as dirt. As a result epidemics were all too frequent. Diseases easily preventable now were then looked upon as visitations of Providence. It is rather startling to learn that pulmonary diseases were, for at least several years, responsible for nearly half of the mortality in town caused by disease.

As people prospered they gave more attention to the matter of clothes. For common wear, cloth of home manufacture was used, but for Sunday and gala occasions something better was desired and the merchants were glad to supply the need. Style was by no means ignored, but fortunately it was not so changeable as now. Men as well as women bowed to its dictates. A good dress would serve for years, and as all the sewing was done by hand this was well. The men wore much broadcloth, fancy vests, and a few were the proud possessors of silk hats. Children's clothes were patterned after those of their elders, much woolen and linen goods being used. Both boys and girls wore leather boots, and few things were supposed to thrill a boy's soul as did the possession of his first pair of red-topped boots. Shoes were made of calfskin or cowhide and had to be kept well-greased to make them impervious to water. In many families it was the custom to have the shoemaker come to the house once a year and "fit out" the entire family with shoes. Stockings and socks were knitted at home, usually from home-grown wool. No one so long as she could knit need feel herself useless or a burden.

The center was the common meeting point for the entire town, yet each neighborhood had its own life, centering usually about the school building. Difficulty in travel and mutual dependence in sickness and times of stress made this necessary as well as desirable. A notable feature of those days was the spelling-school with one district arrayed against another, sometimes township against township. During this period the Twinsburg Institute was enjoying its greatest prosperity and its exhibitions and concerts were great attractions.

There seems to have been little dearth of other social attractions. The hotel was the scene of many social functions, the one of March 9, 1853, being decidedly unusual. That day four of Twinsburg's young men were married, the brides all being from out of town. In the evening a great party was given in the hotel. The invitations were printed in New York and about three hundred guests including all the officiating ministers were present. In deference to the wishes of the brides the grooms hired the bar for the evening and closed it. The dining-room was enlarged for the occasion, enabling two hundred to be seated at one time. The party broke up about midnight, but some of the young people danced two hours longer. Those who came from the Institute could not get to their rooms until morning. Mrs. Sarah Henry Turner remembers that incident well. The four couples were: Israel Lewis Cannon and Ruth Skeels of Bedford, Hoadly Alling and Mary Jane Webb of Newburg, Edwin Parmelee and Mary Hathaway of Independence, Rufus Bailey and Sarah Richardson of Bedford. Mrs. Lewis Cannon is the only one still living in Twinsburg, though both Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Bailey still survive. Hiram Kelly was proprietor of the hotel at that time.

It was in 1852 that Barnum brought his circus to Twinsburg. It was the first season he had Tom Thumb (Charles S. Stratton) on exhibition. Tom Thumb was then fourteen years of age, less than two feet tall, and weighed sixteen pounds. The circus tent was so crowded that there was no room for the circus. It is not surprising to hear that the people called Barnum a humbug. Nevertheless he had their money—and kept it.

The Harrison-Tyler presidential campaign in 1840 was the first of the American spectacular political campaigns, and Twinsburg did her best to give impetus to the movement. A log cabin and a high liberty pole were raised near the center of the square and, of course, a barrel of cider was placed beside the cabin. Wooden bowls were provided for drinking the cider. The boys had a small log cabin close by the large one. A company of forty men, each with a red flannel patch on his left shoulder, rode horseback to Ravenna to a political mass meeting. Their banner bore the inscription:

“With the patriot Harrison
We will storm Mat’s garrison.”

“Tippecanoe and Tyler too” was the slogan of the Whigs who called the Democrats Loco-focos. Excitement ran high. Communication was slow and reliable information as to distant affairs difficult to obtain. While local conditions may have colored their opinions the people gave evidence of a commendable spirit of patriotism in that they viewed the political situation from a national rather than a provincial standpoint.

Previous to 1840 Ravenna was the county seat and Twinsburg a part of Portage county. Summit’s first county fair was held in 1850, but Akron was too distant to be popularly visited and in the early fifties Twinsburg arranged for a township fair. This led to the organization of the Union Agricultural Society, which held fairs in Twinsburg until 1871.

It is undoubtedly true that with some folk prosperity as well as hardship leads to discontent. Such was the case in the late fifties. The desire to better one's condition is not easily satisfied and furthermore, other causes were contributing toward a feeling of unrest. A farm that sufficed for a pioneer and his young family was inadequate when the children were grown and had families of their own. No longer could farms be obtained by simply clearing more forest, yet new homes must be found. The so-called western lands were very cheap and accordingly attractive. Several families left Twinsburg to try their fortunes in new fields, most of them going to Hopkins, Mich. Among those who went there were Chauncey, Harvey, William, Maria, Catherine, and Hannah White; Josiah, James, William, Edwin and Mary Parmelee; John, Robert, Philander and Olive Baird; Pliny and Aurelia Tucker, Albert Lane and Frederick Stanley.

It is difficult after the lapse of so many years to realize the changes that took place during the first forty years of Twinsburg's existence. Yet of those who came to Twinsburg in 1817 only Ethan Alling, Lewis Alling, and Frederick Stanley remained in 1860, Mr. Stanley being the only man in Twinsburg who had voted in the first township election in 1819, and he later moved to Michigan. Mr. Ethan Alling lived till April 22, 1868, having been a resident of Twinsburg fifty-one years and one week.

In 1860 the average age of the men in town who were at the head of families was forty-three years. The average family consisted of about five and one-half members. The following list of heads of families living in Twinsburg in 1860 is taken from the records made by Mr. Ethan Alling that year:

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE TWINSBURG PUBLIC SCHOOLS

E. S. KERR

TWINSBURG has had good schools throughout its history. The pioneers who settled the town came imbued with New England standards of a high order. The influence of Connecticut ideals has been felt in every period of the school history of the town and no doubt has been a controlling factor. Emphasis has been placed upon education to such an extent that always Twinsburg has had commendable schools.

The first school building was built in 1822 on the public square. Moses and Aaron Wilcox, who donated the square to the town, contributed twenty dollars in money for the building. This building served as church, school and town hall. Lavina Merriam was the first teacher. Another building was built on the northeast corner of the square and later moved to the west side of the square where it was destroyed by "Loco-Focos" because anti-slavery meetings were held in it. The desks consisted of a wide shelf around the wall which the pupils faced. They sat upon long benches. Those in the front of the room were smaller for the younger pupils. The studies pursued were the three R's. Punishment for misdemeanors consisted in holding out the palm of the hand for a few strokes of the ferule. After this building was torn down, school was held in the M. E. church.

The township was divided into ten school districts about 1835. Log schoolhouses were built in each district. In 1853 the township was redistricted and a map showing the new districts was prepared by C. W. Mathers, town clerk. The new districts were larger than the original districts and consequently fewer in number. At this time new school buildings were erected in nearly all the districts. The average cost of a school building was four hundred dollars. This period was one of a new awakening along educational lines. Teachers' wages ranged from eight to twelve dollars per month. Increased interest in school affairs resulted in rapid progress. The Board of Education of which Robert Dunshee was chairman, subscribed for and began to read the “Journal of Education.” In these days the Board of Education usually held their meetings in the basement of one of the churches. Records show that Board meetings were held in the Methodist and Congregational churches.

As might be expected the school at the center, district No. 1, because of its larger enrollment and leadership, has occupied the center of the stage. After the destruction of the school building by the “Loco Focos” and while school was being held in the M. E. church, the Board made repeated efforts to purchase the Free Will Baptist church for a school building, but without avail. The Board then purchased the old church, later known as Lyceum Hall, on the east side of the square. School was held in this building until 1885. The building still stands and is owned at present by Miss Alford. In 1885 a bond issue for a new building carried and work was immediately begun on the new building which is the one occupied at present. At this time the Board of Education was composed of the following men: Dr. S. Freeman, pres., P. W. Gott, J. T. Hempstead, Frank Post, L. H. Oviatt and O. E. Chamberlain.

The first superintendent to teach in the new building was A. A. Mall who taught one year. Mr. Mall was succeeded by A. W. Carrier who taught for nineteen years. Mr. Carrier’s work occupies a prominent place in Twinsburg’s school history. He introduced the higher branches into the school and by untiring effort and sacrifice laid the foundation of the present high school. Emphasis was placed upon mathematics as is evidenced by the fact that trigonometry was taught. Mr. Carrier conducted the first high school commencements. The first music teacher to teach in all the schools of the township was Mrs. Cleora Lane who began teaching music in 1903. Mr. Carrier was succeeded by L. G. Bean in 1906 at which time the Board of Education was composed of S. H. Crankshaw, pres., C. B. Lane, H. E. Post, Mrs. E. B. Crouse and S. C. Williams. E. J. McCreery was town clerk. Mr. Bean’s administration marks the beginning of a new era in Twinsburg’s schools. Under his supervision the schools were reorganized and the outlying districts were brought under supervision. The high school was standardized. The first assistant high school teacher to be employed was Miss Ruth Murdock, who began teaching in 1907. Mr. Bean was succeeded by H. L. Janson in 1909. Mrs. Dollie H. Bean was the first high school principal. She began teaching here in 1909. The close of the year 1909 marked the retirement of C. B. Lane from the Board of Education. Mr. Lane served the people of Twinsburg intermittently as a Board member for a period of more than forty years. His work was characterized by wisdom and foresight. To this honored citizen credit is due for the proper solution of many of the School Board's perplexing problems.

The chief development of Mr. Janson's administration was the centralization of the schools. At a special election on June 4, 1910, the people of Twinsburg voted in favor of the centralization of the schools. The Board of Education was composed of P. P. Evans, pres., Mrs. W. S. Lister, F. J. Doubrava, Dr. R. B. Chamberlin and O. H. Bennett. The school building was remodeled. The school was reorganized, placed upon a standard grade and given a first grade high school charter by the state. Messrs. C. E. Riley, O. H. Bennett and C. B. Lane bought about five acres of land adjoining the school property and gave the schools the use of it with the understanding that the School Board should finally acquire it. The teaching staff for the first year under centralization was composed of the following teachers: high school teachers, H. L. Janson, supt., Mrs. Dollie H. Bean, prin., Miss Mary Brown, assistant prin.; grade teachers, Edna Lane, Ellen Bissell, Eloda Holt, Florence Ellsworth, Effie Holt (Dell district). Mr. Janson was succeeded by Mr. F. D. Green in 1911. In 1912 Mrs. Bean was succeeded by Miss Alberta Grant; Miss Brown was succeeded by Miss Edna Lane and Miss Ruby Gall was employed as special music teacher. Mr. Green resigned in March, 1913, to accept an appointment by the State. Mrs. Dollie H. Bean was chosen to complete the unfinished year. Mrs. Bean was succeeded by E. S. Kerr in 1913, Mrs. Bean succeeding Miss Grant as high school principal. Miss Mildred Moore succeeded Mrs. Bean as principal in 1914. In addition to those mentioned above the following persons have taught or are teaching in the grades of the centralized school: Frieda Schmalzle, Mary Keenan, Edna Swan, Frances Moore, Lovina Caster, Ina Walton, R. T. McBride, Christine Doster, Marion Wall, W. A. Forbes (Dell district).

Within the last three years some significant developments of a different nature have manifested themselves. The high school classes in Agriculture have improved the school lawn. Another group built the apparatus necessary for a Chemistry department. Still another group has brought to completion a manual training shop. These improvements and added opportunities for the children have been made possible by the excellent services rendered by the members of the present School Board which is composed of P. P. Evans, pres., O. H. Bennett, G. B. Walton, Mrs. W. S. Lister, W. H. Chamberlin, and E. J. McCreery, clerk. That the people of Twinsburg appreciate the services rendered by this Board is evidenced by the fact that every member has been re-elected and in most cases more than once. There is at present under construction on the school grounds an athletic court of magnificent proportions. This undertaking has been made possible by the contribution of Daniel R. Taylor, a former Twinsburg boy who is also to be thanked for other substantial evidences of his interest in his boyhood home. During the last ten years the Twinsburg schools have been helped in large measure by the work of W. S. Lister whose wisdom, foresight and untiring labors for Twinsburg's betterment have given him a foremost place among our worthy citizens.

SAMUEL BISSELL AND THE TWINSBURG INSTITUTE

Compiled almost entirely from papers in Mr. Bissell's own handwriting by his daughter, MRS. FANNY BISSELL.

FOR my father's ancestry I am largely indebted to his day-book of 1850. Concerning his father's people he writes: "My forefathers were Nonconformists, came from Somersetshire, England, and landed at Plymouth, Mass., in 1628. With others they went across the woods and settled in Windsor, Conn. My father was born in East Windsor and, when young, was left an orphan because of the death of his father in the Revolutionary War. He was brought up by his brother, Justus, and with him moved to Middlefield, Mass., at an early age."

Here in 1796 he married Thankful Cheeseman. There seems to have been some romance connected with the coming to Braintree, Mass., of her ancestor, George Cheeseman, son of Lord George Cheeseman, Earl of Clifford, a Catholic. By the death in the Revolutionary War of her father, Edward Cheeseman, the family of nine children were scattered. Thankful Cheeseman at the age of six found a home in the family of Judge Niles of Braintree, Mass., where she acted as servant, having no education whatever. Later, she went with her brother to Middlefield, Mass., where occurred her marriage to Robert Bissell. And in this rough country their five children were born: Samuel, Apr. 28, 1797; Laura, May 2, 1798; Roswell, Oct. 7, 1799; David, July 4, 1802; Bianca, Apr. 6, 1804.

In 1806 my grandfather, Robert Bissell, with his family were forty days on the road from Middlefield, Mass., through Penn. by way of Pittsburg to Mantua, O. Here he left the family while he went on to select the site of their future home. His choice fell upon a spot in the wilderness one mile southwest of the center of Aurora, Portage Co. He rolled up a log cabin covered with bark, without door, fireplace or chimney; destitute of floor save in one corner where were plank split out of ash on which to spread the beds.

REV. SAMUEL BISSELL

Here, about the middle of July, one day at noon he placed his family and left them to spend the night alone. In the dead of night, while the children slept, their faithful dog gently struck grandmother with his forepaws several times, until he knew she was awake, but made no sound. An animal was heard to approach the cabin and rub itself against the corner where grandmother lay, and then go away. In the morning the children picked long black hairs from off the corner. Bruin could easily have made them his prey had he been so disposed.

Here amid wild beasts, without meat, vegetables, butter or milk, having only bread and a jug of molasses brought from Massachusetts, grandfather had left them to go to Warren. He sold his team and took as partial payment a barrel of pork which, after being brought, proved unfit for use.

Just so soon as my father was sufficiently strong an ax was placed in his hands, and till 1816, he helped fell the trees and clear away the forest until sixty or more acres of dense forest were changed into fruitful fields. Grandfather was a carpenter and as such was absent from home much of the time when his health would permit. Thus it came about that more than a usual portion of the labor on the farm was performed by the children.

When father was about fifteen years of age the War of 1812 took place. He wrote concerning it: "War was declared by our government against Great Britain. There were two great political parties: one in favor of the war called the Republican and now answering to the Democratic party; the other, called the Federalist, now answering to the Republican party who thought the differences between the nations might have been settled much better in some other way. One of our neighbors, a Republican, who had been appointed marshal with full authority, came to my father and demanded his oxen. My father remonstrated, telling him the oxen were his sole dependence in clearing his land and providing bread for his family. Although father was an invalid, it made no difference. The cattle were taken and no remuneration offered and it was not until some time after the close of the war that I rode horseback fifty miles to obtain a pittance for the privation. Such was the unfeeling mind toward one of another party. Party names change but does the depraved mind of man alter?"

As early as 1812 father relates the following: "Went over the entire eastern part of what was then called No. 9 in tenth range. Its owner we knew not nor cared not. We drank of the big spring near Herrick's stone house and found swarms of bees in the trees not far from Mr. Riley's stone house which furnished at least one hundred pounds of honey."

Following these writings I find a description of father's earliest efforts to master the common branches. "In 1814 I rode in the rain and mud through Mantua and Shaylersville to Ravenna and there purchased a large slate which I carried choice as gold under my arm fairly shivering with the cold before I reached home. In November I began to study Arithmetic at the age of seventeen years. Fathers could hardly spare their sons in summer and only in winter could the lower branches of study be attended to. When I reached common fractions I was told they were useless and so omitted them and this practice became common. In 1815 I began the study of English grammar being the only young man in town that attempted it; but four or five young men had gone to Pittsburg or New England for the study of the higher branches. In a short time I recited the theory of "Murray" and when I began to parse the teacher frankly confessed that he was incapable of hearing me. And now I must give it up or go a mile and a half to the pastor, Mr. Seward. I chose the latter. Beside traveling that distance I did chores enough to kill any young man of the present day."

Father speaks of being in two great wolf hunts sometime in 1816 or 1817. These were held for sport and to clear the woods of wolves which were troublesome. Entire townships would sometimes be surrounded by the hunters. These hunts were attended with great danger although the life of constant peril from wild beasts was conducive to good markmanship.

Father continues to write: "In 1816 through the influence of the blessed Bible I united with the people of God and resolved, by the Lord's assistance, to spend my life to benefit my fellowman. For this object I needed a better education.

I urged my father to let me begin a classical course. This he very reluctantly consented to do, but only upon condition that as much time as I should spend doing this before coming of age I should make up after. Since there were no schools in this region where the higher branches were taught I walked each day a mile and a half to the residence of Mr. Seward, pastor at Aurora, and recited as he could find time to hear me. This was kept up for two years during which time I had the sole instruction of a Sabbath school of about twenty persons.

“In 1819, when I thought I was prepared to enter college, there was no such institution in this part of the country. A literary society had been located at Burton and chartered by the Legislature, a building was in process of erection and a man was expected to take charge of the school which was designed to be a college. Mr. Seward was one of the board of trustees and wished me to go to Burton to school. I was not pleased with the idea and determined to go to Yale. But I had no means to defray my expenses abroad. He very kindly offered to assist me if I would go to Burton and otherwise not. I was dependent and felt very unpleasantly to go counter to the advice of Mr. Seward and wept much over it. I resolved, dependent as I was, to put my trust in God and go to Yale.

“With great effort my father obtained twenty dollars and a few friends gave me three more. I fixed upon the day to start expecting to walk to New Haven. Just at this time a merchant from Massachusetts came to Aurora and procured two horses on a debt, expecting to ride one and lead the other. He told me I might ride one if I would bear the expense. Since he knew of my dependence and my object and was himself an officer in the church I felt he was hard. I rode the horse to Massachusetts, starting with only twenty-three dollars. When I arrived I had spent all but five. I walked sixty miles to Hartford but my feet were so sore that I was obliged to take the stage for the remainder of the trip to New Haven. I then had about three dollars left.

“With trembling steps I called upon President Day and told him from whence I came and my object, but took care not to reveal my poverty. He asked me what I had studied and remarked that there was some provision made for poor students after they entered college. But I was not yet prepared for admission. Cut off from all hopes of aid when he left off conversation, my hopes of help from man were gone and my only support was in God. I had supposed I had a friend in college who would help me, but he had gone into the country. All were strangers. I arose with a heavy heart but not desponding and, as I was turning to bid him good-bye, he said very pleasantly, 'You will make your home with us for the present' and took me into an adjacent room, saying, 'This was the study of Dr. Stiles and Dr. Dwight and there is a box containing Dr. Stiles' Hebrew manuscripts,' and there furnished me with books to finish my preparation for college. At Commencement, which took place in about four weeks, I went about forty miles to East Haddam and there remained studying till January, the beginning of the second term of the freshman year, when I was examined and admitted in 1820. I had nothing on which to rely for support and had to be credited or leave. At the beginning of the last term of the freshman year I found work which paid for my board, room, fuel and light. You may well imagine the trials through which I had to struggle. In the autumn of 1821 I taught select school at Plymouth, Conn., and for three months the next fall. Then I went to Harwinton and taught three months and in 1823 six months.

"By these means and with waiting on tables, hearing recitations, and some donations, I was able to receive my diploma in September, 1823, and left college free of debt. With four small trunks I took stage for Buffalo, N. Y., paying double fare. There I put my property aboard a schooner that belonged to Ft. Meigs on the Maumee. Expecting my property would be left at Cleveland I started on foot to make the two hundred mile trip home. After being home a week I sent to Cleveland to learn if my property had arrived and word was returned that it had.

"I asked my father for his oxen and cart to drive through the woods and mud to Cleveland. Over my ordinary clothes I put a logging frock. With food in a pillow-case and whip in hand I started at noon on Thursday, the second week in October. I drove a mile and a half when in a deep mud-hole the bow came off and away went one of the oxen. I got into the mud half a leg deep and extracted the neap from the yoke pulling off the other bow and away went the other ox. I shouldered the yoke and put after the oxen in the woods, drove them back half a mile, put them in a lot and returned home to make a bow-pin. Then I returned, yoked up the oxen, put them on the cart, drove over to the northwestern corner of Twinsburg, and, the night coming on, stopped at a log shanty owned by Oliver Wells. The next day I arrived in Cleveland about noon and went to Merwin the chief business man and asked for my property. It had not arrived. With an oath he asked me on what I had put my property. I named the schooner when he said, 'Why did you not build a coffin and put the property in it and shove it off into the lake?'

"After further inquiry I found the vessel had passed Cleveland in a gale the week before and had stranded at the mouth of Black River. Thinking the vessel might be left there I resolved to drive on. In the meantime two missionaries, Alvin Coe and wife, who had made their way from Vernon, Trumbull County, to Cleveland on their way to spend the winter at the mission station on the Maumee above Ft. Meigs, asked the privilege of riding with me to Black river. I told them I had only a cart and oxen and a board across the box. Mrs. Coe was a very delicate woman, well educated. Many people thought them foolish to go on such an errand. They got aboard the cart and I drove on to Dover where we spent the night and the next day about the middle of the afternoon we arrived at Black river. I left the team and went six miles to the mouth of the river, found the vessel had been stranded, but had got off the day before and had taken my trunks. I started to walk back to my team but it became so dark that I stopped at a log cabin, ate a bowl of bread and milk and took the floor for my bed. In the morning I arrived at the place I had left my team, probably where Elyria now is, and spent the Sabbath. Considering the uncertainty of getting my property unless I went after it I concluded on Monday morning to drive on to Portland, now Sandusky City, where I arrived at noon Wednesday with my missionaries and then drove the team back eight miles and put them out to pasture. I returned to Portland the next morning. Leaving Mrs. Coe to go to Detroit whenever opportunity should present itself, Mr. Coe concluded to walk with me seventy miles to the Maumee. Thursday morning we started and arrived at Lower Sandusky, now Fremont, at about noon on Friday and before us was the Black swamp of forty miles and with but a horsepath through and a shanty half way. We started, expecting to reach the shanty by nightfall, but failing, we lay in the woods sheltering ourselves as well as we could under the trees for it rained and sleeted and became so cold that the snow did not melt on the leaves. About nine in the morning we came to the shanty where the woman made a cake of Indian meal and pumpkin and put it into the embers to bake. This, together with some fried wild duck, constituted the best breakfast I ever ate. It was Saturday noon and Mr. Coe said he could not endure to walk through and would stay till Monday. I inquired the way and alone started for Ft. Meigs. I waded Portage river and went on and on until I came out at dusk on the Maumee opposite Swan creek where Toledo now is. The river was wide, the wind blew a gale. There was a house on the opposite bank but I could neither be seen nor heard and was obliged to camp out for the second night on the cold bank of the river. It was so cold that for the first time that season the river froze a rod out into the stream. As early as it was worth while I went down to the brink and made all possible signs of distress. Soon a man came out of the house down to the river and came over in a canoe. Never was I so glad to see a human being. Soon after landing I pulled off my boots. My heels were so raw and inflamed that I could no longer wear my boots. It was the Sabbath, but my feet so pained me that I got but little rest. Toward evening I put some rags around my feet and walked a mile down the stream to the house of an Indian agent by the name of Stickney. He was a well educated most agreeable gentleman. He had married Molly, the oldest daughter of Gen. Stark. They had four children. The oldest daughter the mother called Molly after herself, the other daughter Indiana. The oldest son they called One, the other Two. After spending the night here I returned to Swan creek and Monday afternoon hired a horse with an Indian to take it back and rode eight miles to Ft. Meigs. Here I found Mr. Coe and the next morning bought a pair of moccasins and walked with him to the mission station, wading the river. It was now November and the vessel had come and gone to Detroit, taking my property.

"I found at the station a young man who had volunteered his services for a year to establish the station. When the year closed he was taken sick and had just recovered so far that chills had left him. He asked to go with me to Aurora on his way home to Meadville, Pa. I told him I feared the ague would return and he would be left among strangers. He insisted on going and we returned to Ft. Meigs. The vessel returned from Detroit on Friday and on Sunday morning started back. As there was no other way of getting to Detroit we both went on board. The young man had six dollars, I was then penniless. Monday morning we arrived at the mouth of the Detroit river but the wind and the current were too strong to allow the boat to go up. I hired a horse and a boy; the young man rode; I walked. We arrived at Detroit in the evening and found Mr. Coe at the residence of Gov. Cass. There we spent the night. The next day I found my property and on Wednesday put it aboard a vessel bound for Portland. We arrived Friday noon. The ague returned to the young man. I went for my oxen, and took on my load Saturday morning and drove eight miles, the young man having a dreadful fit of ague on the way. We spent the Sabbath very pleasantly and Monday morning started on. When we had gone about four miles we found the snow a foot deep and the weather very cold. I went by the side of my cattle in my moccasins through the snow and arrived in Newburg Thursday night. Friday the snow and mud would about half bear up. I was all day till night getting to Twinsburg. Here I had a bowl of bread and milk and slept on the floor. The next day I arrived home about 10 o'clock, having been gone over a month. Such were my sufferings and labor in my course of education."

An autograph album and my father's diploma are perhaps the only relics of the contents of those four trunks which I possess and these I highly prize.

At the end of three months he hired money and returned to Connecticut to study theology with a Rev. Hart of Plymouth and Rev. Pierce of Harwinton. He was licensed to preach the Gospel by Litchfield South Association in 1825. He preached his first sermon in Wolcot, Conn., then supplied for several Sabbaths the church at Waterbury, Conn.

In September, 1824, he was married to Fanny Gaylord of Harwinton, Conn.

In 1826 he returned to Aurora. But sometime prior to his return he was informed of the effort to locate a college at Hudson, O., and was asked, with many others in different parts of the country, to collect funds to begin the enterprise. For some time he went from door to door begging for this object and by these means the first building was erected. In this humble manner Western Reserve University had its beginnings.

A few years later he gave his patrimony of one hundred acres in Aurora to the college. Still later he filled a vacancy for one year teaching in it.

On returning to Aurora with his wife in the fall of 1826 he found the state of education much as ten years before, when he made the resolution to spend his life trying to do good to his fellowmen. He went to Moses Eggleston who owned the land around the center and asked to let him chop down some maple trees and cut them into wood. Mr. Eggleston assented. Accordingly, he prepared some ten cords of wood, had it hauled and deposited near what was called the old academy and then announced that on a certain day a school would commence; the tuition would be two dollars for twelve weeks and as money was very scarce he said, "You may pay me in anything you please, and when you please, and nothing if you don't please." Scholars came in very cautiously at first but before two years had passed nearly all of suitable age were present. Several began preparation for college, among these were two of the first three graduates from Western Reserve College.

Near the end of the two years my father was invited to spend several Sabbaths in Twinsburg. He went but continued teaching in Aurora. About this time he preached the funeral sermon of the twin Wilcoxes. At the end of three months the people of Twinsburg saw fit to ask him to become their pastor. And now I will quote from father's writings concerning his work for several years:

"Dismissed my school in Aurora and moved to Twins-burg in January, 1828. To pay me for the three months service they built a very good log block house, one half mile west of the square, which became my home for many years. In the spring of 1828 was ordained and installed pastor of the Presbyterian church and society.

"Twinsburg was very new; their meeting-house was on the west side of the square nearly opposite Mr. Alexander's, a mere shell of a building with a few seats around on the outside of the room. There were about as many people as could sit around on these outside seats; in the winter it was cold and uncomfortable but before the new church was built it was crowded. On the same lot where the log block house was erected there stood also a log house 20x30, built for a shoe shop. It was very rude with rough boards for a floor and loose ones overhead. Three holes were cut out of the logs for windows of four panes each. There was a fireplace at one end built of rough stones and topped out with sticks plastered over with clay. In the fall of 1828 this was fitted up with seats and invitations were given to all youths of suitable age to attend school welcome, or, if they chose to pay, the tuition would be $2.00 per quarter. Some forty or more scholars were packed into this small space, giving ample employment to one teacher for four months in the year. This continued to be the place of school till 1831. During the first and second winters a school term of four months was held but in the winters of 1831 and 1832 I was called to teach in Western Reserve College and there was no school.

"When I first came the township was comparatively new and the people generally were in very moderate circumstances. Roads were bad and almost impassable at certain seasons of the year. Our houses were poor and our means of living pretty hard. Money was scarce and all business was transacted by barter. I borrowed $100.00 of Zeno Kent of Aurora and paid interest for two years of $40.00. It was during this period, 1831-32, that our first church was built.

"In 1831 the people of the church concluded to erect a building for the double purpose of meetings on the Sabbath and school during the week. They made me sole committee to raise funds for the building. They were to procure the materials and I the money needed. It was finished in 1832 at an expense of $700.00, of which cash part I was obliged to furnish $190.00. My school was now transferred from the cabin to a comparative palace. We then proposed to board scholars from abroad at nine shillings per week, including fuel, lights and washing. Such was the beginning of Twinsburg Institute.

“When the new church was erected it was likewise full. Scarcely a family in town neglected to meet on the Sabbath for public worship. I was in the habit of visiting all the families each year and the visits were pleasant and profitable. We shared the labors and hardships. Many a time we were so poor we knew not today what we should have on the morrow and often Mrs. Bissell and myself walked to Aurora to procure food to bring home in our hands. On one of these visits when we were opposite Mr. Crawford’s, a bear stood in the road before us and when Bruin had gazed sufficiently long at us he took to his heels and fled. In early life I learned to follow the chase and when my father died in 1833 the old beloved rifle fell into my hands. Soon after that a flock of wild turkeys came near the door and I shot two of them and a little later a deer came into the lot nearby and paid the forfeiture of his life for his temerity.

“At about this time in consequence of our common poverty, and feeling that help from abroad would be desirable, I went to New York and procured of Mr. Woolsey of that city, father of J. M. and President Woolsey, twenty-five acres of land as a lifelong possession of the church society. Soon after this I visited Mr. Beers of Connecticut, Commissioner of the school fund, and induced him to relieve, as soon as possible, many of our citizens who happened to settle on a mortgaged tract (Tract No. 2) forfeited to the state of Connecticut, and who felt little heart to improve their lands as they might lose them. The settlement was satisfactorily adjusted.

“At the end of the first seven years I had received not above $75.00 per year as a salary and all was returned in one way or another. The little church of twelve members, I think, had increased to an hundred and fifty.”

But meanwhile a storm cloud had been slowly gathering over the church, brought on by the various opinions held by its members concerning the temperance question. Father’s views were strongly for temperance and as to the need of reform at that time you have only to read "Twinsburg from 1817 by Ethan Alling and from 1820 by Luman Lane." Yet on account of the trials and controversies that were the outgrowth of these opinions father was dismissed and went to Edinburg where he had been invited in the fall of 1835. As to school and church privileges they were in much the same condition as he had found Twinsburg and he resolved to give the youth of Edinburg the privileges of more than a common school education. He first went to Pittsburg and purchased $100.00 worth of books, then opened the school loaning the books to those who came. More than fifty were on hand and profited by the privilege expecting to pay $2.25 per quarter. The tuition the first four months fell short of the cost of the books. In the course of a year and a half nearly all the youth availed themselves of the privilege.

In the fall of 1837 the church invited him back to Twinsburg. He returned and then a series of persecutions followed that are not very common these days. Out of them grew the second church over which father was pastor till 1843 when he resigned to better look after the interests of the growing school which he had resumed upon returning to Twinsburg.

At this time began three regular terms in a school year of forty weeks. Concerning the growth of the school father wrote: "A house 20x35 was erected (where the present stone building stands), 20 feet more were soon added. Boarders from abroad came in and the numbers so increased that in August, 1843, the Tavern at the center was purchased. It was 30x50 and two stories high. Soon another building 30x50 and three stories high was added. In two more years another building 30x40 and three stories high was necessary and a year or so later the old church and academy and an intermediate building were provided. The increase from forty to three hundred pupils, including at least fifty boarders in the family, necessitated seven teachers and assistants to give instruction in German, French, vocal and instrumental music, penmanship and all the common academic studies. No charter was ever obtained and no public money appropriated. Board and tuition were so low that the most indigent found encouragement to enter the institution and avail themselves of its privileges. A large number were received who paid little or nothing. In 1843 three Indian youths left their forest homes about Mackinaw and Traverse Bay, Mich., and landed in Cleveland on their way to Vernon where lived the missionaries who rode with me to Sandusky City twenty years before, and who, after spending some time in Maumee and there passing from lodge to lodge among the Indians in the neighborhood of Mackinaw for several seasons, now worn out in this good service had returned in the evening of their life to their original home in Vernon. These youths called at the Institute and through a French interpreter made known their object, viz.: to find a place by the help of these missionaries where they might go to school. Our doors were open to them, feeling that we were under the strongest obligation to help a poor neglected and injured people, and they went no farther. Others followed these from seven different tribes, east and west, until the whole number reached over two hundred. Most of them remained, on an average, at least a year. All boarded in the family and were supplied with books and stationery. Of these, two have been teachers in academies, one a very respectable minister of the Gospel, several have taught schools among their own people. Andrew J. Blackbird, or Mack-a-de-pe-nessy, son of a chief of the Ottawas from the northern part of Michigan, has been a national interpreter, postmaster, and soon after leaving the Institute obtained from the Michigan Legislature the rights of citizenship for his people in that state. He was the author of "The History of the Ottawa and Chipewewa Indians of Michigan." Another, a Seneca, Peter Wilson by name, graduated at the head of his class of medical students at Geneva, N. Y., and for years was employed by his nation as their agent at the Legislature at Albany to look after their interests; others were interpreters of missionaries, one a councilor of his nation, one a teacher among the Freedmen of the South. During the War of the Rebellion one raised a company of sharpshooters, became their captain and fell in the battle of the Wilderness. Several others joined the army and acted a loyal part. It may be said of them as a body of youth that as large a proportion of them have excelled as is true of an equal number of white students."

In 1853 occurred the death of my grandmother, Thankful Cheeseman Bissell, at the ripe old age of eighty-three years. My father wrote of her: "She fairly shamed all her children in acts of hardship and heroism. Though deprived of all means of learning early she was surpassed by few in the application of what she learned late in life. In the absence of physicians during those early days she deserves the highest commendation for what she did in the capacity in which she was called to act."

Of indigent white youth that father made a home for, aided in their education, and in some cases bore their expenses in college after fitting them; their name is "Legion," and the amount expended much greater than that for the Indian youth. Among these at an early day were William C. Bissell and two sisters, children of a cousin, Orice Bissell, who had died leaving them orphans. Another was Drusilla Featherstone whom he took at nine years of age and educated in music. Subsequently four others of the same family were with them and did well. These are just a sample of the many that were raised in father's family though never adopted.

During the period of giving instruction not less than six thousand were more or less under his care. Among these are numbered presidents and professors of colleges and theological seminaries, members of Congress, governors of states, members of state legislatures, ministers, missionaries, judges, attorneys, physicians and a host of teachers in common and high schools.

In 1860 father wrote: "My former companion, a most faithful wife and a conscientious Christian, was attacked by a pulmonary disease; and while away from home, and watching by her bedside, and after she had closed her eyes in death, I felt that there was no hope of escaping bankruptcy for my indebtedness was not less than six thousand dollars, and I had no means to pay. I said to a friend, "I see no way but to assign what I have to creditors." After I had labored so long, to fail was almost too much to bear. For the moment I was disheartened. I thought of past and trying days and reflected that, trusting in the Lord, I had passed through all difficulties. I resolved that I would cast myself on God and do my duty. Claim after claim was left for collection and in every case, at the end of the stay of judgment, principal and interest were paid. At length I sold the Institution and buildings and nearly completed every payment. Three hundred dollars were saved with which I was determined to build a house in which I might still continue the business of instruction. Thus the stone house was erected, largely with my own hands and the donations of old friends and pupils."

Although the adoption of the free school system by the state, and the breaking out of the Civil War greatly reduced the numbers in attendance, he continued, with the assistance of his second wife, Cynthia Amelia Sikes, a most worthy helper as well as teacher in the school, his life long labors almost to the last.

He passed away at his home south of the center at the ripe old age of 98 yrs. and 4 mos. Thus the career of the founder of Twinsburg Institute was ended. It had its foundation in prayer, the superstructure was reared in faith and corresponding works, and all was under the fostering care of God to whom he always ascribed the honor of the accomplishment.

ADDITIONAL FACTS

As a rule, school catalogues are not considered very interesting reading matter, but surely some of the catalogues issued when the Twinsburg Institute was at the zenith of its popularity must be made an exception. It is a matter of regret that some of these catalogues cannot be here reproduced. Through them the unusual personality of Rev. Mr. Bissell is unconsciously made clear to the reader.

In one of them for the year commencing April 9, 1849, and ending March 9, 1850, the summary gives the attendance of gentlemen as 204, and ladies as 106. Thirty towns and three states are represented.

As to the studies we read: "Instruction will be given in Greek, Latin, French, and German; in Algebra, Geometry, Trigonometry, Mensuration, Surveying and Navigation; in Natural, Moral and Mental Philosophy; Chemistry, Rhetoric, Logic, Astronomy, Mineralogy, Geology and Physiology; In Geography, English Grammar, Arithmetic, Reading, Spelling, Definition, Penmanship and Book Keeping. Also in Vocal Music, Music on the Piano, Melodeon, Flute, Violin, Violincello, etc. In Drawing and Painting. Besides there will be weekly exercises in Declamation, Elocution, and Composition, together with the benefit of a Lyceum. The most approved works in all the above branches will be used. Effort is now being made to add a Library and suitable Philosophical, Chemical and Musical Apparatus, and such other conveniences as shall contribute to its greatest usefulness."

As to location we learn:

"The Institution is situated in the village of Twinsburgh, Summit Co., Ohio, five miles from Western Reserve College, on the road from Cleveland to Pittsburgh, nineteen miles from the former, with a Daily Stage both ways. A Plank Road will be made to Cleveland the present season.

"The buildings of the Institution will accommodate 75 boarders, generally with but two in a room, with a Kitchen, Dining Hall, spacious Halls for study, Music, and Recitation Rooms. The best water in the world has recently been brought to the Institution in pipes, which very greatly conduces to health and comfort. It is surrounded by an industrious, moral, and thriving population. A residence of more than 20 years in the place has proved it healthy almost without a parallel."

Under Sessions and Vacations we read:

"The year is divided into three sessions. The first will commence on the second Monday in April and continue 12 weeks; then there will be a vacation of 6 weeks for the accommodation of the farmer to secure his crops, and for the student to derive profit from labor. Then will commence the second session of twelve weeks, after which there will be a vacation of two weeks, when the winter term of 16 weeks will begin, at the expiration of which there will be a vacation of 4 weeks to continue till the second Monday in April, making, in all, 40 weeks in the year for study."

But more interesting matter is treated of under the heading of Expenses:

"Board, Room, and lodging may be had at the Seminary from $1.00 to $1.25 per week, according to the price of provisions.

|--|--------|
| Tuition in Greek, Latin, and the higher Mathematics . . . | $3.00 |
| In the English branches only | 2.50 |
| In German and French each, extra | 2.00 |
| In lessons on Piano Forte and melodeon, each | 5.00 |
| In Music on Violin, Violincello, Flute &c., once per week | 2.00 |
| Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting | Free |
| Expenses of wood in Recitation Rooms, keeping same, ordinary repairs, &c. | .50 |

Washing will be done in the Institution at 2 cents per article. Wash dishes, pails, towels, brooms, fuel, lights, carpets and curtains, furnished by the student.

If payment is delayed till the end of the term, a difference of one dollar more per quarter will be made. Past experience has taught us not to extend credit, except under peculiar circumstances.

There will be an examination of two days at least at the end of each session, with exhibitions in Music and other things.

Parents and friends are earnestly desired to be present on these occasions."

Tradition tells us that not all the students particularly enjoyed these following regulations:

"Each student is expected to attend public worship where his parents or guardians shall direct.

Students will not be permitted to remain in the Institution who will go and come on the Sabbath, knowing the rule, nor will students be suffered to remain who shall devote any part of their time during the week to dance.

There will be Biblical exercises each Sabbath, on which all may attend.

Every reasonable pains will be taken to guard the morals of youth, and render them comfortable, happy, and contented."

In 1857-8 we notice the expenses are a trifle higher, among other things washing having advanced from 2 to 3 cents per article. Profane language and card playing has been added to the list of things that "will not be suffered," and a Library of over 600 carefully selected books acquired.

The catalogues tell us little about the exhibitions, but many old students remember them as being attended from far and near, and the following program surely shows they were quite properly named.

It is doubtful if anyone ever called Mr. Bissell lax in discipline. He so earnestly coveted success for his pupils that he could not tolerate anything which, in his opinion, would not develop the best in a student. The writer remembers hearing it said, "Those who were sent to his school thought him stern and uncompromising, but some of those whom he practically carried through school thought him 'a little lower than the angels'."

Mrs. Sarah Henry Turner says: "He was a strict disciplinarian, which was necessary, as many were the pranks played. I remember once a bucket of water being placed on top a slightly opened door so that a latecomer received an unwelcome shower bath. If Mr. Bissell suspected a too joyful time was going on in some boarder's room his quiet step would not be heard, but a rap on the door would warn of his presence and—all would be silent within. In church he always occupied the back seat that he might see if any of his pupils were missing from services, he requesting their attendance. His Sabbath commenced Saturday at sundown and Sunday evening he and his wife began week day labors. Doors were locked at 10 p. m. and any one out later must gain admittance as best he could. At 5 a. m. the big bell rang for rising, and at 6 a. m., for breakfast. There were many assistant teachers and at 8 a. m. began the writing class conducted by Warren P. Spencer whose uncle was the originator of the Spencerian system. At meals, many times sixty, or more, sat at the long table, Mr. Bissell at the head. All stood while the blessing was said."

It is related by several that on one Hallowe'en night some academy students appropriated Mr. Bissell's carriage, or stage, and drew it as far as Tinker's Creek. When they had gotten that far Mr. Bissell himself raised a curtain, put out his head and said, "Boys, I guess you have brought me far enough, now you may draw me back"—and they did so.

He had overheard all their plans and accordingly concealed himself in the carriage. It would seem from the above that a sense of humor and discipline are not always incompatible.

Many people of prominence, of whom we can here name only a few were once students at the Twinsburg Institute: Emerson White, once president of De Pauw University, Ohio Commissioner of common schools, and superintendent of the Cincinnati schools; Hon. Henry McKinney, state senator for Summit-Portage district, 1869-70, since common pleas judge in Cuyahoga county; William B. Hazen, once chief of the weather bureau; Gen. Lucius Fairchild, who sometime held the office of member of Congress, governor of Wisconsin, consul at Liverpool, consul general at Paris, minister to Spain, commander of Dept. of Wisconsin G. A. R. and commander-in-chief of National Encampment G. A. R.; Gen. A. C. Voris and Hon. U. L. Marvin of Akron; Dr. Knowlton, Hons. D. W. Gage, and W. S. Kerruish of Cleveland. Of the latter it can be said that in his active appreciation of Rev. Mr. Bissell and his work he has shown himself to be a truly grateful friend.

Another man not yet mentioned was Chief Pokagon, the last chief of the Pottawattamies. His father ceded to the U. S. government 1,000,000 or more acres of land including the present site of Chicago. Chief Pokagon spent the latter part of his life in efforts to obtain from the government the price agreed upon, finally securing nearly $200,000.00. He was highly educated. He spent two years at the Twinsburg Institute after leaving Oberlin College. Throughout his long life his deepest desire was expressed in his tireless efforts to keep "the white man's fire-water" from the Indian.

Many have publicly proclaimed their indebtedness to Mr. Bissell for their start in life, and not a few in a substantial manner remembered him when his days of activity were past.

A few of the older students, inspired by Mrs. Ruth Sheels Cannon and Miss Juliette Parmelee, arranged for a gathering to celebrate the 95th birthday of Rev. Father Bissell, as all in later years called him. As many of the old students as could be reached were invited to come and bring a basket, and one dollar as a birthday gift. The large school room was decorated and filled with friends who rejoiced to do something to brighten his declining years and honor the faithful teacher. He was a very happy man, though nearly blind. Short talks were given by Judge Marvin, Hon. W. S. Kerruish, Henry Watterson, Chas. Lane and others. Mrs. Ruth Cannon recited an original poem, "To Our Aged Teacher." One hundred and ten dollars were left to remind Mr. Bissell of the esteem in which he was held.

Mr. Bissell lived until Aug. 26, 1895, his comfort ministered to by his family, friends among his former students, and the Presbytery with which he always maintained his connection.

Gracious tributes were paid at his funeral and the passing years have more and more plainly shown that they were faithfully deserved.

A RETROSPECT

It is now well nigh a century since Rev. Samuel Bissell came from Aurora, a single purpose in his heart, to serve his God by service to his fellowmen.

It is not humanly possible to measure his success. To be sure, the crude cabin is now gone, Lyceum Hall is now a store-room, the old Institute building is torn down, and even the stone building of which Mr. Bissell said, "The rock of Gibraltar will as soon give way, without an earthquake," presents an altered aspect to the passerby. A thoughtless man might say that the Institute is gone. But is it? Minds were quickened and trained, new purposes were brought into life and currents of thought and action started that can be terminated only by the end of time. Twinsburg's share in this honor is that her sons and daughters, from generation to generation, availed themselves of the opportunities offered them.

Comparatively few men live to experience such satisfying fruition of their labors as did Mr. Bissell. He never experienced affluence; little enough the ordinary comforts of life. Yet his life was full and the sunset hours made peaceful because he had made his full contribution to society.

It is to the credit of the present citizens of Twinsburg that they delight to honor the memory of this stalwart figure whose long life spanned so extensive a period of the town's development.

A TRIBUTE

W. R. ROSE

I.

“Deep in the wildwood his clearing was made;
Deep in the forest his torch redly flamed;
Firm in the soil his foundation was laid;
Rude were the timbers he fashioned and framed.
There in his temple he taught and he prayed—
Voicing the mission that hosts have acclaimed.

II.

“Worn was the pathway that led to his door—
Worn by the seekers who came from afar;
Widely he scattered his bountiful store—
Far shone the light of that beautiful star.
Heavy the burden he cheerfully bore.
Calloused the shoulder he put to the car.

III.

“Shadows that drift in a wavering line;
Shadows that circle and halt by the wall;
Shadows of seekers enriched from the mine,
Learners who came at the magical call;
You drew the life from the sturdy old vine—
Steward and master, he gave you his all!”

MUSIC

WHEN man becomes domiciled in a new country there is every dependence placed upon nature, and every effort made to bend nature to meet the needs of the human family. Under such conditions one would scarcely expect to discover much activity in the pursuit of the finer arts. Yet this very struggle with nature seems to engender in man a desire to free himself from his bondage to nature, and to improve upon nature by adding something of himself to it. Our forefathers were many of them artists in their individual lines of work and, doubtless, most of them cherished the hope of a life less burdened with drudgery and replete with the more enjoyable features of life. At least we may be sure they wanted the best things in life for their children, and, mindful of the good things in their New England life, they were rather good judges of what of the old life it would be well to incorporate in the new. So we are not surprised to learn that it was possible for a singing master upon his arrival here to find plenty of material to form a singing school.

The man was Luther B. Prentiss whose boyhood home was in Plainfield, Vt. He had settled in Warrensville, O., and came from there to Twinsburg in 1823, following the marked trees through the forest. He started the first singing school held in Twinsburg and conducted its weekly meetings for a considerable period of time. He has the distinction of having conducted the singing at the dedication of the first church in Twinsburg. When that church celebrated its fiftieth anniversary he was residing here with his son Willard C. Prentiss. He lived to be ninety-four years of age, dying in 1897.

As a matter of fact, there is little positively known about musical matters during those earlier years. Mr. Samuel Bissell realized the value of music as an accomplishment, and also its desirability as a feature of his school, and early included it in his course of studies. The man who probably did the most for Twinsburg musically was an instructor in music in Mr. Bissell's school.

Mr. John W. Fessenden came to Twinsburg in 1845 and began teaching music in the Twinsburg Institute, holding this position until 1860. Wednesday evenings he taught beginners the rudiments of music and inspired many to take up musical careers. Friday evenings were given over to instrumental music, and Sunday evenings were devoted to sacred music. These classes were free to every resident of the town and many availed themselves of Mr. Fessenden's instructions. At the close of each term a concert was given and an admission fee charged. After these concerts Mr. and Mrs. Bissell often served an oyster supper, charging only 25 cents per couple. The musical instruction offered at the Institute attracted many students from afar who came largely on account of the musical course.

Aside from his work in the Twinsburg Institute he taught singing schools, bands and orchestras in several nearby towns. He gave private lessons on the violin, flute and other instruments. For a long time he had charge of the choir of the Congregational Church and under his direction it had the enviable reputation of being the best country church choir in the Western Reserve.

For many years during the summer months he conducted singing school for the children, usually concluding the work with a juvenile concert. Many remember the cantatas given, especially the "Shepherdess" and the even more talked of one "The Flower Queen" in which Victoria Southworth took the part of the queen so beautifully that for years she went by the name of Queen Victoria.

Concerts were a feature of the Twinsburg Fairs. Under the leadership of Prof. Fessenden groups of young people, selected from the best singers in the town, rendered musical selections for the entertainment of the crowds that were accustomed to attend the Twinsburg Fairs. At the fair in 1857 Emma Fessenden and her mother, Mary Fessenden, sang the duet "Ruth and Naomi." The Foster Family and Company also gave concerts at the fairs here.

There are many who can be remembered as having, at some time, taught music here. The old fashioned singing school was decidedly a social institution and usually prospered.

Richard Redfield had a large singing class here in 1860, and about 1865 Mary Garzee (Chandler) taught a class in music. Some of the older musicians now in Twinsburg received their first instructions from her. A few years later Mary Prentiss (Foote) and Alice Pratt (Clark) were giving lessons in music. About 1874 Mr. Volney A. Curtiss, himself a good tenor, began conducting a singing school here and continued in this work for several years. There are many now in town who were in his classes and participated in the concerts given under his direction. Alla Fessenden (Rudgers) for several years was a teacher of music here and was an inspiration to many musically inclined. Letella Fessenden (Baker), another daughter of Prof. J. W. Fessenden, was a help to the town musically, being church organist and leader of music in the W. C. T. U., giving much attention to her work.

To a large extent the churches have always fostered musical talent. The early churches possessed no instruments and few hymnals. At that period the minister often led the singing. The tuning fork was the chief reliance of the chorister and quite a commotion arose in one of the churches when the chorister took his "fiddle into church," but later, the deacon's son was playing the bass viol there. It was probably in the fifties that organs, or rather harmoniums, were introduced into the churches.

Diminutive affairs that they were, they at least inaugurated a new era in church music.

Musical instruments in the home were infrequent, those in comfortable circumstances sometimes had small melodeons. As pecuniary matters improved the melodeon increased in size, was superseded by the organ, and that in time was replaced by the piano. The first (1865) organ in town was Miss Tina Dunshee's and it is still in good condition. The first piano in town for private use was Miss Stella Clark's. Today the home where there is no piano is the exception.

While the older generations had their singing schools these classes later became less popular and, as private lessons were more easily obtained, about a quarter century ago were practically discontinued. It did not take the thoughtful long to discover that there were all too many possessed of some musical talent who were receiving no musical instruction. Music was ceasing to be a community affair. Only a very few were studying vocal music. The condition was noted, discussed, but nothing of a preventive nature attempted. However, the feeling that all children ought to have an opportunity to learn something of music persisted. The solution seemed to lie with the schools and arrangements were made to have music taught therein. It was a difficult matter as there were several schools, each of several grades. Indications of good results were forthcoming surprisingly soon, and later, when the question of centralization was before the people, the argument that the centralized school would afford better opportunity for musical instruction, was no little factor in the decision for centralization.

Few things really test one's love of music as does the position of church chorister in a small town. There have been many in the Twinsburg churches who have spent themselves freely in the service of the church trying to bring about better musical conditions. It would be impossible to name all even could we measure the importance of their work. In the Congregational church Zeno Parmelee led the singing for about twenty years; Josiah and Richard Redfield rendered faithful service, as did Elisha Herrick, and Luther Nichols who proved a satisfactory leader. Abner Lane spent much time and work in his leadership. Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Lane were enthusiastic workers. Mrs. S. H. Hull was for many years a faithful organist and in later years her daughter, Mrs. Lida Beaumont, assisted in the work. Mrs. Newton Herrick and daughter, Mrs. Flora Yost, are remembered as faithful and efficient. Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Hanchett rendered faithful service in both Baptist and Congregational churches.

In the Methodist church Mr. Jesse Crankshaw, Miss Esther Carter, Mr. Evelyn Parmelee and Harrison Dunshee are recalled as choir leaders. Mr. S. H. Crankshaw was chorister for twenty-six years. He was succeeded by his wife who, as Millie Norton, first played the organ in church at the age of twelve, and held the position of organist for twenty-seven years. Their daughter, Mrs. Mabel Culhan, succeeded her mother as organist. Mrs. Crankshaw began giving music lessons about forty years ago and has continued in the work until the present, being actuated primarily by love of the work, and during that time has never solicited a pupil. Mrs. Ora Elliott is another who has been faithful as a member of the choir and as organist. Mrs. Ethel Twerell both as vocalist and pianist of more recent years has rendered efficient service. Mrs. Ethel Griste Vial is a highly accomplished musician and her removal several years ago to other fields of labor has been a distinct loss to the musical life of the town.

BANDS

While the people of Twinsburg have ever been able to sing in time and tune other forms of musical expression have had intermittent seasons of success. Common folk can sing at any time and in any place but when dependence is placed upon reed, wind and stringed instruments for the enjoyment of music a newly settled country offers many difficulties. It was about thirty-five years after Twinsburg was settled when her first band was formed. That it was organized by Prof. Fessenden and was a success for a short time is about all that can be learned concerning it. Some of the members were: Orrin Redfield, Richard Redfield, Henry Holcomb, Hosford Hull, Aurelius Tucker, Henry Parmelee and Evelyn Parmelee. The latter is living in Twinsburg at the present time.

THE CRITERION BAND

The Criterion band, formed in 1884, was the first band that existed any length of time and that performed any notable part in the town's musical development.

A few boys interested in the matter held a meeting and requested Prof. Fessenden to organize them and others into a band. So many responded to the invitation of Prof. Fessenden that it was impossible to accept all. In order to make a proper choice he asked each candidate to whistle or sing. Those showing what he considered musical talent he organized into the Criterion Band. Beside those appearing in the picture of the band there were: Otis Bennett, Ed. Crouse, T. Taggart, Abner Lane and Bert Chamberlin.

The name Criterion was derived from the brand of instruments they purchased in a complete set from Brainard and Sons of Cleveland. The members met for practice twice a week in the old school house on the east side of the square.

Their expenses were met by giving band socials and entertainments. They were fully uniformed and well drilled in marching. Besides playing for socials and entertainments they played for Decoration Day services, fairs, soldiers' reunions and various public gatherings. Those who witnessed the band on parade will long remember Prof. Fessenden with large pompon on hat acting as drum major. His baton will be on exhibition at the Centennial Celebration in 1917.

A good band wagon in which they were conveyed to various places was owned by the band.

This band played for ten years. After completing a course of instruction under Prof. Fessenden they chose S. D. Scoutten as leader and continued to play under his leadership until the band was discontinued.

LATER BANDS

About this time there were three other bands in the town, none of which existed long. As these broke up many of their members joined the Criterion.

The North Street Band consisted of T. C. Cochran, Bert Chamberlin, Abner Lane, Hosmer Lane, Gideon Mills, Elmer Buell, Will Smith, Will Parmelee and C. E. Riley.

Among the members of the West Street Band were Frank C. Lane, Ed. Lane, Clare Hempstead, Carl Hempstead, Adelbert Dodge, Fred Jenkins, Frank Parmelee, George Walton and Henry Beldin.

Neither of these bands were uniformed.

THE MARTIAL BAND consisted of R. T. McManus, Jas. Fisher, W. H. Boose, David Nelson, R. Mitchell, Chas. Donahue, John Mulligan, and Wm. Taggart. This band was one of ten to play at a barbecue in Cuyahoga Falls about 1885 and by invitation led the other nine in the Grand March. Jas. Fisher, bass drummer, and Robt. McManus, fifer, continued to play for a long time, and later were joined by Abner Lane, fifer, and James Brown, snare drummer. They furnished martial music for about fifteen years. The last time they played together was Decoration Day, 1899.

TWINSBURG CONCERT BAND

In the year 1909 Prof. Parkinson, a young musician studying at the Dana Institute, Warren, O., came to Twinsburg to organize a band, having heard, as he expressed it, that it was a decidedly musical town. He interviewed several of the young men of the town who agreed to assist him and, if possible, to learn to play an instrument so that for the benefit of the town a band could be formed. A meeting was held, following a call for volunteers, and about twenty responded and expressed a willingness to organize. A complete set of band instruments was ordered and, in due time, arrived ready for distribution. Prof. Parkinson examined the lips and by several other methods of his endeavored to place the instruments to men whom he thought best fitted for them. One good parent was much disturbed the next morning, when, upon asking his son, to whom he had given fifteen dollars for his share in the instrument fund, to see his band instrument he was shown a "measly little" piccolo and he insisted that his son be given an instrument of some size.

Under the careful instruction of Prof. Parkinson, the band held weekly practice meetings for about a year, at the end of which time the instructor left his work in Warren and moved to Ann Arbor, Mich.

Prof. Wm. T. Kirk, a veteran band leader of Cleveland, and the director of Kirk's Military Band, one of the oldest and best known organizations of Ohio, became the instructor for the boys of Twinsburg. For a year or two he gave his strict military teaching to the band and so forcibly did he impress the band that the name of the Opera "Martha" still lingers with the members of the band.

Prof. Geo. Kerwin of Cleveland succeeded Prof. Kirk and for a year he drilled the band, giving special attention to tuning of the instruments by getting the correct number of vibrations in a given tone, and other methods of teaching favorite with him. At this time the band met with several difficulties by reason of men leaving town for school and seeking employment elsewhere and the band was forced to discontinue for a time. Feeling that a good band was a necessity in a live town, steps were taken to get in new players. Soon eighteen players, all high school boys, were chosen and under the direction of Dr. R. B. Chamberlin, S. D. Scoutten and others, were faithfully instructed for a year when several of the players remaining from the old band joined them and the present Twinsburg band was organized and put on a business basis for the primary purpose of being a benefit to the town. Under the leadership of Dr. R. B. Chamberlin, assisted by S. D. Scoutten, this band has been a blessing to the town. It has been well organized for several years and, although beset with many difficulties, always found in keeping a country band together, it is still keeping up its practice and filling many out-of-town engagements, in addition to giving semi-monthly park concerts on Saturday evenings which have attracted large crowds from Twinsburg and all the neighboring towns. Twelve hundred people or more are known to have been present on one occasion. These concerts have often been supplemented by other features such as vocal music, drills by the children, moving pictures and other events.

The members of the Twinsburg Band are fully uniformed, have all first class instruments and play the best of band arrangements. This band has made special plans for the Centennial and will furnish no small part of the entertainment during Centennial week in 1917.

ORCHESTRAS

Barbers' and Scouttens' Orchestra was organized for the purpose of playing at dances, and was in existence about 1880. S. D. Scoutten played first violin, Fred Barber, second violin, Frank Barber, bass viol, and Frank Scoutten, flute and piccolo. They played for the Western Reserve Academy dances, at the first dance at Kent House, Geauga Lake, and at most of the dances in the surrounding small towns. They also furnished music at the entertainments given by Mr. Bissell's scholars.

Prof. Fessenden led an orchestra consisting of S. D. Scoutten, cornet, Abner Lane, violin, Perry Hanchett, flute, and Letella Fessenden, piano. This orchestra flourished in the early eighties.

In 1899, another orchestra was formed consisting of S. D. Scoutten, first violin, Bert Chamberlin, second violin, Frank Lane, cornet, Mrs. Frank Lane, piano. This orchestra played till 1901.

The Western Reserve Orchestra has been playing since 1910 and has deserved the credit the people willingly give it. It has filled many out of town engagements and added much to the life of the community. Dr. R. B. Chamberlin is the leader. The personnel of this orchestra has been rather varied and the following list does not give mention of all who have at some time played: M. E. Culhan, cornet; F. D. Barber, Mrs. A. W. Elliott and Mrs. Roy Stingel, violins; Bert Chamberlin, second violin; Roy Stingel, viola; Mrs. R. B. Chamberlin, cello; E. B. Crouse, bass viol; A. W. Elliott, clarinet; Arthur Dunscomb, saxophone; Orrin Nichols, trombone; B. Forbes, flute; Orland Bishop, drum; Elmer Wing, trap drums; Mrs. M. E. Culhan, piano.

Thus it will be seen the people of Twinsburg have not been content with an existence barren of the higher forms of enjoyment and education. That the struggle for better things has not been vain is attested by the fact that the people demand good music. Whatever the next century may bring in musical advancement, it is a matter of no small moment that a firm and sure foundation has been laid during the century past.

HISTORY OF TWINSBURG BAPTIST CHURCH

ELIZA P. REED

THE first regular Baptist Church of Twinsburg was founded by those early settlers who, like their ancestors, were devoted to the principle that man should worship God according to the dictates of conscience. The first record, Dec. 7, 1831, states, "It was resolved, for the advancement of the cause of Christ, that we form ourselves into a conference."

June 15, 1832, six delegates who had responded to invitation, were received from Perry and Chardon. These were joined in council by Elders Chas. A. Turner of Twinsburg and Robert Missildine of Northfield. "A church Covenant and Articles of Faith and Practice were adopted. The right hand of fellowship as a Baptist Church was received by Brethren Junia North, Pearly Abbe, William Carter, and Sisters Mary Beach, Rachel Carver, Betsey Carver, and Anna M. Carter, all of whom had letters from sister churches." Two days later, Elder Jesse Hartwell baptized David Beach and Oliver Brown, making a beginning of nine members, increased during the first year to twenty.

The first Article of Practice reads: "We engage that we will receive no one into our fellowship as members of this Church but such as give a satisfactory evidence of a work of Grace on their hearts, and whose lives appear to correspond with their profession, and have been buried with Christ in Baptism." Regulating christian living "to correspond with profession" appears to be the foundation of much church action as recorded in the minutes of that date. Church requirements and home discipline were enforced with the same measure of old Roman severity.

In 1833 delegations were sent to Grand River Baptist Association at Geneva, also to Silver Creek Baptist Conference at Mantua. Twinsburg was one of the churches to animate the organization of the Portage County Baptist Association founded in 1834. At its annual meeting Twins-burg was always represented, and for many years Rev. C. A. Turner was Moderator.

Baptist history of this section would be incomplete without mention of Elder Turner's remarkable personality, whose lifetime of labor as a pioneer preacher was devoted to the Gospel as he felt "it was delivered to the saints." Coming early to Twinsburg, he lived, and reared twelve children on the small farm which he worked that he might not be a burden to the churches. Tho always connected with the Twinsburg church his untiring labors extended over a large range of neighboring territory, where he was engaged preaching, sometimes for only one-half or one-fourth the time. He was the first minister of the Twinsburg Church and afterwards, at intervals, whenever they were without a pastor. He was always ready to help in their need, sometimes serving a part of the time only. The salary he received was at best meager and frequently there was no regular remuneration.

Other elders connected with the church history are: Caleb Green, Brewster, Barnes, Dodge, and Lester Ferguson, evangelist.

This was the first regular Baptist church in the section. Like the leaven that leavens all it reaches, its members assisted in establishing churches in all the townships adjoining, besides many others near. The minutes record frequent calls and response for help in conference and organization.

Following a great revival season, 1838 shows an addition to the church membership of thirty-two, making a total of fifty-four, the largest ever enrolled.

The ordinance of baptism was always observed at Tinker's Creek, sometimes when it was necessary to cut away the ice.

The first recorded meeting of Baptists was held at the home of David Beach, the second in the Methodist meeting house, then on the northwest corner of the square, the third at the Academy where the organization was completed. They were dependent upon others for a place to worship for nine years. In 1841 their first church building was erected. It was located on the north side of the square, where today it serves as hardware store for E. B. Crouse.

In 1842 the church petitioned the legislature and so the following year was incorporated.

The church was not forgetful of the benevolent objects of the day. Burmah was one of the early fields of interest and help. In 1834 the Association recommended raising twenty-five cents from each member, and Twinsburg reported five dollars, increasing to fifty-four dollars in 1842 and varying in amounts during other years. Deacon North was early appointed on the Executive Board of the Association Missionary Society, where he served many years.

Deacon White was another whose life was spent in the Twinsburg Baptist church. He was its first and only deacon. Following in the line of generations of Baptist deacons the allegiance he gave to the representative principles of the denomination could not have been altered by time or trial. In his heart this church and its interests held first place.

After occupying their church building on the north side of the square for eighteen years they moved to the church vacated by the Free-will Baptists and located on the west side of the square. "A more commodious place of worship" states the church report of 1859.

This church membership was never large. The average was twenty-eight and a half. During the lean years of the Civil War only nineteen were enrolled. A pastor wrote, "Not large in numbers but large in heart."

The periods of ten pastors and five clerks are shown in the table appended.

The State Convention for aiding the churches helped in sending P. P. Kennedy as pastor in 1856. From the minutes we learn, "Still their motto is onward and upward, striving to maintain the worship of God in the faith of the Gospel."

The Portage Association met with the church in 1866 and again aided in filling the pulpit. Elder Crandall gave new vigor to the church. At that time it was customary to hold three consecutive sessions on Sunday. The morning service being followed by Sunday School. Then a short recess when the well-filled lunch baskets were emptied and neighborhood news exchanged. After which came the afternoon service with the regular sermon when the small children were allowed to sleep. Usually friends attended the last service.

The weekly prayer-meetings were held on Thursday afternoon except the last week in the month when the Covenant meeting came on Saturday. Communion service was bi-monthly.

Again the church felt impelled to move, this time because of the blacksmith and wagon shop which was so close that its Sunday activities resounded above the voices of worship. The most desirable location that could be obtained was where the town hall now stands on Cleveland Road. To this place, in 1867, the church building was moved, some repairs were added and sheds built on the rear of the lot.

1869 was a year of sorrow, because of the death of the church clerk, Calvin T. Reed, who had faithfully filled that office for twenty-six years. Other responsible and honorable duties in church and Association had been consistently discharged during his years of faithful service. The Association bears witness, "His life was salt, was light."

The Portage Association was organized to cherish and serve the small churches of which it was composed. In 1870 the time came when in its best judgment it could better serve by turning the current into the larger stream. So they recommended to their component churches that each unite with other adjoining associations. The Cleveland Association was nearest Twinsburg so they entered that in 1877.

The church maintained its regular appointments "thankful to Him who gives a heart for the work and ability to bear burdens." The attendance decreased and after the death of Elder Turner in 1888 there was no regular communion service. Elder Tolhurst of Bedford visited among the members who now numbered fifteen.

In 1877 there was a great revival in Twinsburg. Baptist minutes read: "Considerate to God's will, a few members were permitted to meet in Covenant meeting for the first time in two and one-half years." Two new members by their faithful adherence to conviction inspired the church to feel they ought still to stand for the principles taught by their denomination." In response they organized, filled the vacant offices, repaired the church at a cost of $450.00, and called as pastor Rev. J. R. Thompson of Chester X Roads, Ohio.

The following year the church registered thirty members a Sunday School of forty-six, with good equipment of books and periodicals. The offering to missions was fifty-six dollars. Devotional meetings were introduced bringing to the church two days of revival conducted by Association leaders. The prayer-meeting was sustained with interest. The Sunday evening service was shared alternately with Congregational and Methodist churches. The Woman's Society was organized to help meet the church expenses. Mrs. A. J. Brown was president. Everyone helped, often those outside, and they raised $200 a year. Their regular meetings were once in three weeks at homes where they were invited. The church was blessed with Divine favor. The pastor characterized it as earnest, faithful and loving.

So for six years during two pastorates, the church nurtured those given to its care. Often not knowing which way to turn next thru the difficulties, learning by trials that, "Man's extremity is God's opportunity."

In 1885 the last pastor resigned and the aged deacon died. Left with only three male members, and not seeing any plain path, the church waited to be assured it had fulfilled its mission.

Nine years later the last church meeting was called with Bedford Baptist pastor moderator. The trustees of Twinsburg Baptist church transferred the property to the trustees of Bedford Baptist church and as many of the members as wished received letters to that church. The church building was sold and remodeled and has since served as town hall.

This church is like many others in its history of faith and struggle. The Truth which was made stronger by their lived of consecration and service is still to be maintained and bequeathed by God's children. May all like them merit the commendation, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

FREE-WILL BAPTIST CHURCH

A "Free-will Baptist church was formed April 24, 1843. Their meeting house was built in 1847 and burnt in 1851, and rebuilt the same year. In 1859 it was sold to O. Riley who exchanged houses with the Baptists."

It is regrettable that no other reliable information can be obtained regarding this organization.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

BY REV. R. T. CROSS

For the first five years, 1817 to 1822, religious services were held in private houses and in the upper part of the grist mill. Lewis Alling, Sen., usually led whent here was no preaching, alternating some of the time with Asa Upson.

About 1821-2 Rev. John Seward, pastor at Aurora 1812 to 1845, preached once in four weeks. Rev. William Hanford, a general missionary from New England, preached one-fourth of the time for several years. He was pastor at Hudson 1815 to 1836. Other ministers preached occasionally. Most of the first settlers were Congregationalists from Killingworth, Conn.

ORGANIZATION. August 23, 1822, Rev. John Seward and Rev. William Hanford organized the church in the school house built that year on the public square. Mr. Hanford preached the sermon. The articles of faith, covenant and rules of practice were those recommended by the Portage Presbytery. There were thirteen charter members, as follows: Lewis Alling, then 44 years old, Belizur Beech and his wife Rachel F., Robert Hurd, about 35, and his wife Mary, James H. Kelsey, 21, and his wife Fanny, 21, Luman Lane, 26, Mrs. Comfort Nichols (wife of Noah P. who was 29), Irena Thomas, 18 (later the wife of Luman Lane), John A. Wells, Hanford White, 25, Mrs. Julia Ann White, 55, (wife of William White). More than half were under 30. Luman Lane, Hanford White, John A. Wells (who died in 1824) and Irena Thomas united on confession. Seven brought letters from Killingworth, Conn., as did twenty-three more later on. Lewis Alling and Comfort Nichols brought letters from the Hudson church.

ECCLESIASTICAL CONNECTION. It was a Congregational church, as plainly appears from the records, but, under the Plan of Union between Presbyterians and Congregationalists which then prevailed in the west, it was from the beginning associated with Presbytery, and hence was often spoken of as a Presbyterian church. July 28, 1836, the church voted "that we sustain the church government that we have always sustained (Congregational) and still hold our relation to Portage Presbytery." February 19, 1835, a "council" was called for advice, which was a Congregational way of getting it. October 15, 1838, the church voted unanimously to ask Presbytery to dissolve the relation existing between them and that body, but nothing seems to have come of that vote. On November 18, 1841, the church sent a delegate to help form a Congregational Association at Hudson and on December 15 approved the constitution presented there. Yet the relation with Presbytery continued. On November 20, 1860, a Congregational council installed Rev. Sidney Bryant. On April 19, 1861, the dual ecclesiastical relation came to an end when the church, with only three dissenting votes, withdrew from Presbytery and joined the Puritan conference, with which it is still connected.

PASTORATES. The Bissell Era, 1828 to 1843. For nearly six years the church had no regular pastor. Among those who preached for it were Revs. John Seward, William Hanford and Samuel Hale. When there was no preaching Luman Lane, Philo Mills and Robert Hurd were asked to lead the Sabbath meetings. In the winter of 1827-8 the influence of meetings in Hudson reached Twinsburg. For a time meetings were held every evening. At the end of eight weeks a committee went to Aurora to get the school teacher there to come and preach for them. He was Samuel Bissell, then thirty years old, a graduate of Yale (see sketches of his life). He was called at a salary of $150 besides what missionary help they could get. The first year he received but half of the $150. In 1834 it was raised to $300. On January 1 of that year thirty-five had joined the church. He was to preach not less than two-thirds of the Sabbaths each year.

He began January 13, 1828, preaching seven Sabbaths on trial, for which they paid him a good log house worth $28.00. He was then called, and was ordained and installed April 30, 1828, and remained pastor seven and one-half years. In that time he received 141 members. He also started Twinsburg Institute. See its history in another chapter. In 1835 he went to Edinburg and remained a year and a half, preaching and teaching, returning in 1837. October 7, 1836, the church had asked him to return, an action which the church a year later declared irregular. March 30, 1837, the church asked Presbytery to install him again, which was not done.

DIVISION—SECOND CHURCH. December 3, 1834, about twenty members signed a paper in which they refused to consider themselves as any longer under the control of Presbytery, and claimed for themselves the name of the First Calvinistic Congregational Church of Twinsburg.

They claimed that the ministers had too much power in Presbytery. They could not, without much expense and trouble, discipline their members. They wanted the privilege of forming their own rules and regulations and of disciplining their own members, subject only to the exalted Redeemer, and not to the Portage Presbytery. They were evidently simon pure Congregationalists. They did not succeed in starting another church, and nearly all at different times came before the church, made explanation, and had their names restored. They were Dan Parmelee, Elisha Lane, Alanson Mills, Jedediah Clark, Abel Ingraham, Leander H. Ingraham, Chauncey Hull, Samuel H. Hull, Robert Hurd, Lewis Alling, Salmon A. Taylor, Alexander Nicol, William Scott, Ebenezer H. Wilcox, Josiah Redfield, William W. Southworth, Andrew Kirkwood, Gideon H. Mills, Martin Wilcox, Joel W. Thompson and Sylvanus G. Redfield, a rather substantial list of good men. As a sort of test case Robert Hurd was tried in February, 1835, and suspended for signing the paper, a council sustaining the action.

But more trouble was to come. June 8, 1837, after Mr. Bissell's return, the church bewailed the discord and alienation that had existed for two years and voted that all who wished to withdraw and form a new church might do so if they would give notice within two weeks, in which case they would cease to be members of the church. On the next Sunday afternoon, a new church of fifty members was organized, over which Mr. Bissell was installed by Presbytery, May 2, 1838, and remained pastor until the churches re-united in May, 1843. At the organization Mr. Bissell read a paper, which is still extant, in which he laid the blame on those who had opposed the temperance cause. Yet six days later the old church passed a strong temperance resolution. The difficulty was probably one of method.

During the six or more years of separation several ministers preached for the old church, which was left with a membership of 80 or 90. Among them were Rev. Samuel Hair for one or two years from October 26, 1835, Rev. Joseph Treat one year, Rev. Ebenezer Ward one year, Rev. Chester Chapin two or three years. See sketches of these and other ministers in genealogical section.

Very full articles of faith, covenant, etc., were adopted by the second church. In the six years of its history there were 55 members, and 41 when the churches reunited. No one ever joined it on confession. Nathaniel Wilcox and Jared Atwater were the deacons. The records in a book by themselves are preserved by the present church. Most of them are in the neat hand of Mr. Bissell, though Eli Lee was chosen clerk in 1838 and Joel R. Parmelee in 1841. The latter was also treasurer the last three years.

The old church naturally did not take kindly to the new organization. Charges were brought against Mr. Bissell. He was unsuccessfully labored with and then complained of to Presbytery for "irregular and disorderly conduct." Those who had left them were voted "guilty of a high misdemeanor and were proper subjects of discipline." Fellowship was withdrawn from them and letters to the new church refused. The old church received back some of the members without letters, for which the new church complained to Presbytery and was sustained.

In March, 1842, the new church said in substance, "You all come and join us." The old church laid the overture on the table. Nine days later the old church said in substance, "You all come and join us and we will support Mr. Bissell's school." The new church said no, and gave their reasons. In April, 1843, the old church sent word that on candid reflection they felt that the spirit of most if not all of them had not been the spirit of Christ, which they sincerely regretted. The next day the new church responded favorably and three days later still voted for union on condition that there be unfeigned cordiality towards Mr. Bissell, that they sustain the doctrines of the gospel as expressed in their articles of faith, and that there be an express understanding that they remain the uncompromising adherents of the order of our churches as expressed in I Cor. 14, 34, 25 (in which Paul forbids women to speak in the church). The old church accepted these conditions. On May 30, 1843, Presbytery met here and united the two churches, and they have been one ever since. Mr. Bissell, no longer pastor, lived on, useful in church and school, for fifty-two years longer, until 1895. At the fiftieth anniversary of the church in 1872 he read an interesting paper, reviewing his connection with the church.

BEFORE THE CIVIL WAR, 1843-1860. July 31, 1843, Rev. Robert C. Learned was called as pastor of the reunited church at a salary of $400 and four weeks vacation. He was installed September 27, 1843, and dismissed April 8, 1846. In his resignation he stated that they had reduced the salary one-eighth and had not paid half of what even then was due. He thought they were starving him out, as Parliament starved Charles I by withholding supplies. Different ministers supplied the pulpit in the next two years. Mr. Learned's son, Rev. Dwight W. Learned, is a very prominent missionary to Japan and has been highly honored by the Emperor for his services.

Rev. Horace W. Palmer was ordained and installed April 5, 1848, at a salary of $350. He was dismissed April 5, 1852, resigning on account of poor health, declining the church's generous offer of funds for taking a five months' vacation. The church parted with him reluctantly. He was so tall that the boys called him the high priest. The congregation filled the church.

January 1, 1853, Rev. Joseph H. Scott was called at a salary of $500. He accepted the next October, was ordained and installed in November, preached his farewell sermon November 14, 1858, but was not dismissed by Presbytery until April 5, 1859. In August, 1857, he suggested that the morning service be closed with Congregational singing. This caused trouble and in the interest of peace he withdrew the suggestion but resigned. The church unanimously refused to accept his resignation. He regretted only five hopeful conversions in five and a half years, and spoke of a "divided church," of "worldliness and schism," of downward progress under his and the two preceding pastorates, for fifteen years, and implied that covenant breaking was tolerated and the church ruled by an oligarchy. During most of the next two years Pres. George E. Pierce and Prof. Henry B. Hosford, both of the college at Hudson, supplied the pulpit.

PASTORATES DURING AND AFTER THE WAR. Rev. Sidney Bryant was called August 21, 1860, at a salary of $500, and installed by council November 21. He remained until October 7, 1867, when he left, chiefly for lack of financial support.

Rev. Andrew Sharp was pastor from January, 1869, to May, 1872, at a salary of $700 and parsonage. Following him Dr. Hitchcock supplied for two Sabbaths and Rev. A. N. Chapin for eleven.

The fiftieth anniversary was observed August 23, 1872. Among the speakers were Luman Lane, a charter member, Rev. Samuel Bissell, the first pastor, Dea. Joel R. Parmelee, Rev. Sidney Bryant, and Charles Lane, who gave a history of the church.

Rev. Aurelian H. Post was pastor from October 1, 1872, until April 2, 1882, at a salary of $800 and parsonage. It was the longest pastorate in the history of the church thus far. April 1, 1877, thirty-six joined on confession and five by letter, the largest number that ever joined at one time. The tradition of the excellence of his preaching still lingers in the church.

Rev. Charles M. McNulty was pastor from October 1, 1882, to September 28, 1884.

Rev. William Haynes was pastor from October 12, 1884, to October 1, 1889.

Rev. Charles H. Lemmon, coming from the United Brethren Church, was called October 28, 1889, at a salary of $700 and moving expenses. He began work March 1, 1890, and remained until February 24, 1895. During his pastorate, after June 1891, he preached Sunday afternoons at Macedonia, where thirty-seven persons petitioned for a branch church. The Twinsburg church called a council and the branch church was organized August 5, 1891. L. R. Foster and A. R. Munn were the deacons. It was organized with nineteen members. In 1897 it had thirty-four. It is now extinct. Since leaving Twinsburg Mr. Lemmon has had twenty years of excellent work in Cleveland, and is now pastor at New London.

Rev. A. Wilmer Swengel was pastor from April, 1895, until October 30, 1898. He is now in business in Harrisburg, Pa.

Rev. Joseph Wolfe began his pastorate January 1, 1899, and closed it April 20, 1902. His son, Jesse Benjamin Wolf, is a missionary in China.

Rev. Arthur T. Reed, who had been state evangelist a number of years, was called July 21, 1902, at a salary of $1000, he to secure $200 of it in evangelistic work, for which he was allowed to be absent ten weeks each year. He closed his work April 9, 1905. He died in Cleveland March 24, 1910. In December, 1904, Mr. and Mrs. Shafer assisted him for a week in special meetings.

Rev. Walter R. Blackmer began work June 4, 1905, and closed it November 30, 1911, after a pastorate of six and a half years. He is now pastor at Arcade, N. Y.

Rev. Roselle Theodore Cross was called July 29, 1912, at a salary of $900 and parsonage and four weeks vacation. He began his work September 1, 1912, and closed it August 31, 1916, at the age of seventy-two. The church asked him to remain after that as pastor emeritus. In the fall of 1916 he was to supply until a new pastor should be secured.

For further information about pastors and other church officers see their names in the genealogical part of this book.

Mills, Charles Lane, Harrison Dunshee, Wallace W. Chamberlin, Chauncey B. Lane, Oscar O. Kelsey, Hosmer C. Lane, Peter P. Evans.

CLERKS: Luman Lane, Rev. Samuel Bissell, Josiah Redfield, Hector Taylor, John W. Dodge, Zeno Parmelee, Rev. Robert C. Learned, Joel R. Parmelee, John M. Hart, George Stanley, Rev. Samuel Bryant, Rev. Andrew Sharp, Oscar O. Kelsey, Henry W. Cannon, Charles E. Riley, Hosmer C. Lane.

TREASURERS (of the Church): Elisha Lane, John Dodge, Dan Parmelee, Nathaniel Wilcox, Jared Atwater, Lewis Alling, Daniel W. Richardson, Joel Parmelee, Edward Crouse, Sen., Nelson C. Dodge, Hosmer C. Lane, W. B. Parmelee, Charles Lane, Oscar O. Kelsey, Helen Dodge.

DISCIPLINE. The discipline of members was much more frequent and thorough in the early days than it is at present. The records of several church trials are found in the minutes. The most common offenses were falsehood, swearing, Sabbath breaking, dishonesty, heretical views, and especially covenant breaking by absenting oneself from church services and ordinances. In a number of cases the offending member confessed his wrong and continued in membership.

MORAL REFORMS. Resolutions were occasionally passed against the great evils of the day, as slavery, intemperance, etc. The first was on June 17, 1833, when it was unanimously voted that the church views the making, vending and using of ardent spirits as a rank moral evil. November 5, 1834, a motion not to receive members unless they would pledge themselves to total abstinence, etc., was lost by one vote. Four weeks later the same in substance, only stronger, was passed and it was voted to put it in the articles of faith and practice. Two months later it was rescinded, not because it was wrong, but because it was too radical for the present. On June 14, 1837, just after the radical temperance people had left and formed a new church, the old church resolved that they would not admit members who refused to promise that they would not make, use or provide for others ardent spirits as a beverage, and that has been substantially their attitude ever since. In 1844 the deacons were instructed to get raisins for communion purposes, and in 1857, and again in 1874, it was resolved to use the pure juice of the grape. In 1858 resolutions were passed against going to the post office or making cheese on Sunday, and against slavery. Dea. William Wilcox profitably ran a non-Sabbath breaking cheese factory for years.

MEMBERSHIP AND REVIVALS. During Rev. Samuel Bissell's pastorate of seven years and seven months he received 141 members, 85 of them joining in 1831 and 1834. From 1822 to 1843 the number received each year was as follows: 13, 3, 5, 0, 3, 0, 17, 9, 3, 36, 11, 12, 46, 5, 13, 3, 14, 3, 21, 1, 3, 8, total 229. When the churches united in 1843 there were 128 members. The reported membership by half decades since 1855 has been: 1855, 126; 1860, 106; 1865, 68; 1870, 98; 1875, 71; 1880, 105; 1885, 106; 1890, 134; 1895, 175; 1900, 150; 1905, 128; 1910, 120; 1915, 150. In The Ohio Observer for September 28, 1833, Rev. Samuel Bissell reports a recent and powerful revival in Twinsburg. For seven days four or five hours were spent each day in united prayer, and sixteen sermons preached. Sunrise prayer meetings were held. There were about fifty conversions. April 1, 1877, when Mr. Post was pastor, forty-one united, thirty-six on confession. Union services were held in 1865-6 and twenty joined the Congregational church. In 1913 twenty-nine joined, all but seven on confession, and nearly all from the Sunday School, largely a result of Decision Day.

CHURCH PROPERTY. "The First Congregational Society of Twinsburg" was incorporated by the state legislature December 27, 1830, more than eight years after the church was organized. The charter gives the above name but in its records it is almost always spoken of as "The Corporation." It and its officers have to do solely with the temporal affairs of the church. Joint meetings of the church and corporation are "The Society," so called in the records of those meetings. Its province has been to call and dismiss pastors, and, until recently, to provide for the salary. Three efforts to follow the usual custom of our churches now and have but one organization, the incorporated church, have been unsuccessful.

The first building used was a log schoolhouse built on the square in 1822 and used for school, town house and church. Timber was brought for a two story building, school below and church above, but a town meeting voted that no public building should be put on the square. Yet it was finally built there, one story high, was twice moved and then torn down.

A Congregational church and school building combined was built in 1831 and occupied January 18, 1832, the money for it, $700, being raised by Rev. Samuel Bissell. Later it was used for a town hall and still stands on the east side of the park. It was built by volunteer labor, some quarrying stone, some laying them, others hewing timber, framing it, etc. It was 60 ft. by 30 and was used by the church until the present building was erected.

After the churches reunited in 1843 the feeling increasingly prevailed that there should be a new house of worship. Between March 19, 1846, and September 20, 1847, there were seven votes of acceptance of different sites—the Hankston place, the Scott place, the present location, the site of the present Methodist church, the Alexander place, the public square, and again and finally the present location, bought of Zeno Parmelee for $200. Lewis Alling, Justus T. Herrick and John W. Dodge were the building committee. The upper part was to be used for religious meetings only. The $3300 raised by selling pews paid for the building with a small surplus. Forty slips were sold in advance September 27, 1847, and the rest later, 72 pews in all. There were four at each end of the present platform space. They sold at from $10 to $100 each, totalling $3300 and averaging about $47.

The following persons bought pews: south side, Huldah Wilcox, Justus T. Herrick (2 pews), Chauncey Lane, Jared Atwater (2 pews), Elisha Lane, Benjamin Oviatt, Dan Parmelee, Daniel Richardson, Zeno Parmelee, George G. Dodge (2), Frederick Stanley, James T. Herrick, William Porter, Albert A. Atwater, Dan W. Richardson, Hanford White, Jonathan E. Herrick, Lewis Alling, John G. Stevens, George Stanley, Charles F. Stanley, David Bissell, Joel R. Parmelee, William W. Southworth, Philetus Smith, Almarine B. Tinker, Isaac Hanks, Samuel Bissell (4), John Odell, John Smith; north side, Arba Porter, John G. Stevens, Agnes Smith, Augustus W. Herrick (2), Zeno Parmelee, Luman Lane (2), John W. Dodge (2), Samuel W. Herrick (2), James Hill, Israel Cannon, Hector Taylor, John F. Clarke, Ethan Alling (3) Julius Lane, Orrin Tooker, James Henry, Cephas Bissell, Lorenzo Riley, Elisha L. Parks, Richard T. Smith, S. A. Andrews, Nathaniel Wilcox, George D. Harris, Mrs. Thomas, Samuel H. Hull, Samuel Bissell (4). Mr. Bissell had four on each side, at the rear, for the use of his pupils.

The church was dedicated in November, 1848, Rev. J. Hopkins of Chagrin Falls preaching the sermon from Ps. 122: 1. It was printed in pamphlet form.

It was voted to inclose the church with a fence with two gates in front. In August, 1908, the church was redecorated and painted inside. Cost, $245. One year, 1856-7, the steeple blew off and was repaired at an expense of $210. In 1913 about $1600 or more was spent in reconstructing the basement, putting in water, closets, a kitchen, etc., two large rooms being arranged with folding doors between. The next year an asbestos roof was put on and the interior repapered, repainted and recarpeted. The repairs in two years were nearly as much as the original cost of the church.

The horse sheds were built and owned by individuals in 1859. Numbering from the north they were owned by George Stanley, Joel R. Parmelee, William Wilcox, Julius Lane, Lorenzo Riley, Albert Atwater, Luman Lane, Justus T. Herrick, Blodgett Bissell and Lewis Parks.

The parsonage was willed to the church, with three acres of land, in 1865, by Mrs. Huldah Alling, widow of Lewis Alling. It was valued at $2,000, and its use at once added to the pastor's salary. The study was built in 1870 at a cost of $353.

The society lot of 25 acres southeast of the village was donated in 1832 by W. W. Woolsey. It has generally brought an income of $40.

Mrs. Lorenzo Riley made a bequest that brings $40 yearly to the corporation, and also a bequest of $200 the interest of which is to be used in buying books for the S. S. library. $250 was received from the estate of Fanny Bissell.

In 1863 lot 94 in the cemetery was bought for a ministerial burying lot.

In 1895 Mrs. Lorenzo Riley gave the town clock at an expense of $350.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS. May 5, 1851, it was voted to dispense ordinarily with agents for benevolent societies. Later the word ordinarily was struck out.

March 7, 1858, the choir that sings under Mr. Fessenden and the one that sings under H. Herrick were invited by vote of the church to sing together, Mr. Fessenden to take charge for six months.

November 7, 1856, it was voted to sustain prayer meetings in the school houses.

March 15, 1877, a motion to return to the old custom of having communion in the afternoon was lost.

September 22, 1887, it was voted to have a roll call the second Tuesday in October. It became an annual event for many years.

October 12, 1895, it was voted that the clock run by sun time. In 1907 standard time was adopted, and eastern time in 1914.

The schedule of benevolences adopted in 1865 contained six causes for which, as a denomination, we do not give now.

In 1856 Ethan Alling asked if he could commune with the church. The question was referred to a committee. He was not a member of any church, there being none in the vicinity with whose doctrines he was in full agreement. He was Calvinistic, a Baptist as to baptism, but did not regard the mode as essential, had been immersed. The committee reported that "in the judgment of charity he was a Christian," but later Presbytery advised that he unite with some church whose views harmonized with his, and that then the church at Twinsburg extend to him the privilege of communing.

During Mr. Bissell's pastorate the people stood during the prayer and sat during the singing. In the new church they rose during the singing and faced the gallery, where the singers were.

SINGERS. Mrs. James H. Kelsey and her sister, Philena White, were the main treble singers in the first years. After Zeno Parmelee came in 1824 he led the singing for about twenty years. Other leaders have been Josiah Redfield, Richard R. Redfield, Sylvester Southworth, Mr. Root, Joel R. Parmelee, John W. Fessenden many years, Elisha E. Herrick many years, Luther H. Nichols, Hosmer C. Lane, Frank C. Lane, Arthur Dunscomb, Mrs. Walter S. Lister. Mr. Fessenden had as well trained a choir as any church could furnish in the musical conventions then in vogue.

SUNDAY SCHOOL. There was no Sunday School until sometime after Rev. Samuel Bissell came in 1828. The following list of those who have served as superintendents is probably incomplete: Dea. Nathaniel Wilcox, John Dodge, Joel R. Parmelee, Clark Stevens, Mr. Shepherd, father of Rev. Mr. Palmer's wife, Daniel W. Richardson, Jr., Dea. George Stanley, Charles Lane, O. O. Kelsey, Chauncey B. Lane, Orville C. Clark, Luther H. Nichols, A. B. Hawkins, Adelbert A. Dodge, Frank C. Lane, George B. Walton, Wallace Chamberlin, George Wall, Charles E. Riley, Fred J. Bissell, Ray O. Bissell, Earl S. Kerr, P. P. Evans, and perhaps others.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY was organized in August, 1875, with two members, Fannie Wilcox and Frances Parmelee. Records began to be kept March 3, 1876, when there were ten members and it had become auxiliary to the W. B. M. I. September 13, 1877, Miss Frances Parmelee went as a missionary to Japan. In April, 1891, it combined the home with the foreign work and became auxiliary also to the Ohio W. H. M. U. The whole amount of money raised has been about $2100. Miss Sabra Bates has been secretary fifteen, and treasurer thirteen years, thus serving twenty-eight years in all. The society has had the following presidents: Mrs. J. T. Herrick, 1877-9, Miss Fannie Wilcox, 1879-80, 1883-4, 1886-7, Mrs. William Elliston, 1880-3, 1887-9, 1898-9, Miss Frances Parmelee, 1884-5, Mrs. J. W. Fessenden, 1885-6, 1889-90, Mrs. C. H. Lemmon, 1890-2, Miss Helen Dodge, 1892-8, Mrs. Joseph Wolfe, 1899-1902, Mrs. Arthur T. Reed, 1902-5, Mrs. W. R. Blackmer, 1905-08, Miss Sabra Dodge, 1908-16.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR was organized early in 1887, after the revival meetings of that winter. The membership was soon 129, from the three churches and Sunday Schools. When the Epworth League was organized the number was smaller. Until 1889 meetings were held on Tuesday evenings. A Junior society was organized in 1895. The following persons have served as president: Fremont A. Nichols, Charles E. Riley, Carl W. Hempstead, Luther H. Nichols, Mary Stanley, Eliza Reed, Frank Lane, Mrs. Seth Hanchett, Clarence Wright, A. W. Elliott, Sophronia Clark, Hosmer C. Lane, Hattie E. Lane, Elodie McManus, Gustave Scholz, Hattie Crouse, Nellie Crouse, Mrs. E. B. Crouse, Edna Lane, Mrs. Carrie Smith, Lynn Chamberlin, George Walton, Florence McManus, Gertrude Doan, Elodah Holt, Arthur Dunscomb, Mildred Dunscomb, Earl S. Kerr, Corinne Evans, and perhaps others.

THE CONGREGATIONAL DIME SOCIETY was organized February 10, 1869, its object being "the repairing of the interior of the church." In 1916 its name was changed to "The Woman's Association of the Congregational Church." The whole amount raised to date has been about $5000, an average of about $160 per year. The following persons have served as president: Mrs. E. L. Parks, Mrs. E. P. Sharp, Mrs. L. Riley, Mrs. Lucia Hawkins, Mrs. Nelson Dodge (5 yrs.), Mrs. Erastus Daniels, Mrs. C. E. Wilcox, Miss Nellie Dodge, Mrs. Albert Hawkins, Mrs. Harrison Dunshée, Mrs. J. T. Herrick, Mrs. William Haynes, Mrs. Mary Lewis, Mrs. E. B. Crouse, Mrs. W. W. Chamberlain, Mrs. L. H. Nichols, Mrs. H. W. Cannon, Mrs. Newton Herrick, Mrs. Magdalena Crouse, Mrs. D. N. McElroy, Mrs. E. M. Otto, Mrs. John O. Baldwin, Mrs. Frank Twerell, Mrs. Oretta Riley (5 yrs.).

JANITORS. Among those who have served as janitors were "Tone," a colored boy, William Bissell, a student, Elisha Lane for years, Zeno Parmelee, Joseph N. Higley, the first one to receive pay, Joel P. Garzee, janitor and usher, Dea. Crouse, Edward B. Crouse, John Baldwin.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

BY MRS. S. H. CRANKSHAW

The first available records of Twinsburg tell us the early settlers were in the habit of holding religious services. Sometimes they were held in the upper part of the grist mill, but usually in some home. They were conducted, possibly, by a missionary, a preacher from some neighboring town, occasionally by a Methodist circuit rider, but more usually by Lewis Alling or Asa Upson of this place. Since a large majority of the early settlers came from Connecticut, we would naturally expect to find many Congregationalists, fewer Methodists, and a goodly number with membership in other churches. Notwithstanding their several church relationships back in the East, after braving the common dangers of the wilderness, they were glad to come together for the worship of a common Heavenly Father.

In 1822, a log schoolhouse was built on the square. It was used as schoolhouse, townhouse and church, and here the circuit preachers on their rounds often proclaimed the Gospel. It appears that in the late twenties it became increasingly difficult to make satisfactory arrangements regarding the use of the schoolhouse for Methodist services, and as a result of this difficulty, until the erection of the first church, the Methodists worshipped in private homes; most usually at the home of Solomon Upson, who lived on the farm now occupied by W. H. Chambers, on the Cleveland road.

As to the formal organization of the Twinsburg Methodist Episcopal church, the first steps were taken in the spring of 1821, by the formation of a Methodist class at the home of Asa Upson, whose house stood directly west of where Guy Herrick now lives. It is very probable the class was organized under the presiding eldership of Wm. Swayze, and possibly Rev. Ira Eddy was on the circuit, although nothing definite can be learned. When this class was formed Twinsburg became a part of the Cuyahoga Circuit "which embraced the whole region watered by the Cuyahoga River, whose name it bears," and which was formed in 1818. The Ohio Conference, of which this circuit was a part, was composed of two districts, five circuits, and had two presiding elders, and eight preachers. In 1824 the General Conference formed the Pittsburg Conference. Another change was made in 1836, when the Erie Conference was formed from the northeastern portion of Ohio, and the northwestern portion of Pennsylvania. Again in 1875 a change was made, and the East Ohio Conference was formed embracing that part of Ohio which lies to the east of the Cuyahoga River, and from Lake Erie to the Ohio River. This arrangement continued until 1912, when the East Ohio and North Ohio Conferences were consolidated, forming the North-East Ohio Conference which embraces ten districts, with more than 500 regular appointments and 25 special appointments, with 865 churches and 152,000 members, and possessing property valued at $9,193,000.00. When compared with the Conference of 1818, we see the wisdom of our forefathers in establishing churches in eastern Ohio.

Until 1828, the circuit to which Twinsburg belonged was in the Ohio District. At this time a new District, Canton, was formed. In 1832 it was changed and called Warren District, and in 1834, Ravenna, and continued thus for many years, when it was changed to the Akron District. Twinsburg was in the latter till the fall of 1912, when it was transferred to the Cleveland District. It is now in the Akron District having been transferred there at the last conference (1916).

A circuit in those early days meant, perhaps, its extreme points were 100 miles apart, or so large that it would take six weeks to cover it. Usually each circuit had two preachers, a senior and a junior. The former would oversee the work of the circuit, and the latter would assist him. It meant much work for these men, as for instance, nine times to preach in one week, and each time at a different place, without the modern conveniences in travel. The records show that since the formation of the class, Twinsburg has been associated on a circuit with Hudson, Streetsboro, Northfield, Fish Creek, Bainbridge, Brandywine, Dacos Corners, Butlers, Aurora, Solon, Macedonia, and Glen Willow, excepting the years 1871-'72, 1874-'79, 1894-1900, when it was a station, as it has been since 1909.

The first Methodist church in Twinsburg was built in 1831 on the northwest corner of the public square, possibly about 40 feet south of where E. J. McCreery's store now stands. This building was used as a church only 18 years, but during that time many souls were saved and much good accomplished. The building, when it was replaced by a new one was purchased by Harvey McFarland and removed to his lot. He afterwards sold it to James Hill who moved it to the northwest of his house, or about where L. H. Bennett's house now stands. In 1871 or '72, Mr. Hill sold it to Henry Lusk who moved it across the street to the rear of his lot where it has since been used as a barn.

When the need of a larger building became imperative the Methodist Society bought land of John and Betsey Clark. It was "deeded December 8, 1847, to Thaddeus Carter, James Roach, Nelson Upson, Simon Gould, Aaron Post, William Clark, Robert Cochrane, Henry Bennett, and Avery P. Clark, as Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church Society, and their successors in office." The consideration was $175.00. On this land the church now in use was built in 1848, Fred Bunnell and William Clark being the contractors. It was dedicated in January, 1849. Rev. A. Hall was pastor at the time and Rev. John C. Ayres was Presiding Elder. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. Day of Newburgh. Revs. J. C. Ayres and John Bain assisted in the service. The cost of the church, which was $3000.00, was met by subscription.

The church has undergone many repairs, and many changes have been made. Of the latter, one of the most noticeable was in the first year of Rev. D. Rowland's pastorate, (1876) when the high narrow pulpit, and the seats in the southwest corner were removed, the rostrum built out, and a new pulpit and chairs procured. In the large room below, a partition was erected, dividing it into two rooms. In the one, with the necessary furnishings, a comfortable room resulted where prayer meetings, socials, etc., could be held. Kitchen furnishings occupied the other. At a later date (1889), $700.00 was spent upon the interior of the church. It was given a thorough renovation, the rostrum was extended into the southeast corner; eight memorial windows replaced the old ones. Six of them were gifts from the children of sainted fathers and mothers whose former relation to the church has ever been held in sacred memory. The names of these departed members were: Mrs. Eliza Alling, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Herrick, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. William Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cochrane, Mrs. S. E. Booth, Mrs. Betsey (Carver) Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Adin Post, Ezra Clark. In 1895 the cushions for the pews, at a cost of $200, were purchased. Other amounts were expended from year to year as necessity demanded. In 1903 the coal-oil lamps gave way for the more satisfactory lights from the generation of gasoline. The past year electric lights have been installed.

The men who, after careful consideration, formed the rules of the church as given in the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, showed wisdom in advising to "build churches plain and decent, and with free seats." When the new church was completed the members and friends of the church selected their pews, and in all these years they have been recognized as "his" or "her" family pew.

The Good Book says, "A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast." Our forefathers accepted the truth of this statement, and in October, 1858, erected sheds at the rear of the church where their oxen, or horses, and wagons would be protected from heat or storm while the owners enjoyed the privileges of the sanctuary. The sheds are still in use.

In 1839 trustees were appointed to raise subscriptions for the erection of a parsonage. A lot was purchased of Ethan Alling for $100. The deed was given July 8, 1841, to T. A. Carter, James Roach and William Clark, as trustees. The records tell us "a house 28 feet long, 22 feet wide, 14 foot posts, and a barn 22 feet long, 16 feet wide, 14 foot posts" were built. Three or four years later a wing was added to the east of the house. The upright is still in use and in a fair state of preservation. In 1883-4 the trustees thought to repair the wing, but finding it past repairing, concluded to tear it down and build a new one containing a dining-room, kitchen and pantry. The cost was about $250. A good porch was later built to the front of the upright, which added to the looks, and comfort of the home. Electric lights have been installed also in the parsonage this year (1916).

One of the most characteristic features of early Methodism, was the "class." The work of the old class leaders has for many years been performed, more and more, by the pastors. Probably this is well, yet the loss to the church of those stalwart men, who had in their souls a deep feeling of personal responsibility for the spiritual well-being of their fellow members, has not been inconsiderable. Some of the class leaders remembered by those now living are: "Uncle" William Clark (as he was familiarly called) and T. A. Carter. After the death of the latter George W. Dresser held the position.

A few instances are given in the records of young men who wished to take up the work of the ministry, and who, when the Quarterly Conference (now called District Conference) of this circuit was held at Twinsburg, were licensed to preach. Nelson Henry (of Bainbridge) and John Akin were licensed July 4, 1831, and Henry Chamberlain in 1843. Avery Proctor Clark who came to this place when a young man, received his license in 1838. He afterward became a successful doctor of medicine and followed that vocation as long as able. L. W. Ely, also from Bainbridge, was licensed in 1840. He afterward served twice as pastor of this charge, 1854-6, and 1874-6. Hiram W. Carter, son of T. A. Carter, was given a license in 1864. He later became a successful physician at Cuyahoga Falls, O. Alanson Mills was also classed as a licensed preacher or exhorter. Carl W. Hempstead, second son of John T. Hempstead, received his license from the Methodist Conference, but later entered the Congregational ministry, and is now pastor at Riceville, Iowa. Charles Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jones, is another young man to go out from Twinsburg to preach.

He has an appointment to the Methodist church at South Hamilton, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. John C. Blackman, whose membership is with this church, but who, at present, reside in Montana, have a son, J. C. Blackman, in the Congregational ministry.

The members of the Official Board consist of the Stewards, Trustees, Traveling and Local Preachers, the Superintendent of the Sunday School, the President of the Epworth League, and the President of the Ladies Aid Society. When organized, it is the duty of the Board to devise, and carry into effect, suitable plans for providing for the finances of the church, and discharge such other duties as may, from time to time be committed to it. Of the many who have held important positions on the official board, we will mention only a few: Wm. Clark, T. A. Carter, Jonathan E. Herrick, Wm. Parks, Harvey McFarland, George Dresser, Joseph Greenlese, Robert Cochrane, Frank Wright, Thomas Cochrane, Joseph B. Carter, John T. Hempstead, Robert B. Chamberlain. The present members of the board are: Stewards, A. W. Elliott, Mrs. F. T. Twerell, Mrs. E. J. McCreery, V. R. Hempstead, Mrs. W. E. Twerell, and M. E. Culhan, Recording Steward; Trustees, A. W. Elliott, W. H. Boose, S. H. Crankshaw, C. A. Cannon, V. R. Hempstead.

It would be difficult to imagine just how the present generation would submit itself to the disciplinary measures of the older days. Primarily, these measures were adopted for the real good of the society, but of course, it was not always easy to differentiate between the essentials and non-essentials in those exercises intended to promote spiritual growth. Not only members, but class leaders, and occasionally even pastors allowed themselves to be led away by matters of form rather than of spirit, as appears in the following incident, during the pastorate of Allen Fouts, 1851-2. He ruled to have the men and women sit on opposite sides of the church as in the old church. A prominent member of that day did not favor the proposition, and would not vote for it. He was threatened to be "churched," which meant to be eventually turned out of the church. His reply was, "All right, but I'll join again every six months the rest of my life." The question was finally dropped.

It is a matter of history that during the winter of 1827-8 there was a great revival of religion in Hudson. Owing to the fact that Twinsburg was on the same circuit with Hudson, it does not seem strange that this spiritual revival soon reached the Twinsburg church, and many were added to its membership. In 1834, another revival is reported as resulting in the conversion of 70 or 80 souls. In the winter of 1838, Liberty St. was the scene of a most marked religious movement. There had been for sometime an afternoon preaching appointment at the schoolhouse under the direction of Rev. W. S. Worello, the Methodist preacher of this circuit, which culminated in arousing a deep religious sentiment, and wonderful results followed. One of the first converts was the teacher of the school, Horace Benton, then 18 years of age, who, in after years became prominent in the Methodist church of northern Ohio, as well as the head of the drug house of Benton, Myers and Co., of Cleveland. His stand had a most important influence not only upon his scholars, but upon the young people of the street.

Very probably John Wesley Gould who died in 1908, and Horace Benton who died in 1913, were the last ones that could have told of the great things God did for them in the Liberty St. schoolhouse revival. During the pastorates of J. H. McCarty (1856-7), G. J. Bliss (1865-6), L. S. Rader (1886), A. C. Welch (1887-8), and others, many were brought into the church. We would make special mention of the revival of Jan.-Feb., 1877. Rev. D. Rowland was pastor, and with Rev. A. H. Post of the Congregational church, held union meetings every night for six weeks, with extra services in the afternoons. God's blessing was on those meetings, for never were people favored with finer sleighing than that winter. They could find no excuse to stay away from the meetings, nor wished for any. The services could not be alternated between the two churches, for the Methodist church could not accommodate the crowds. The Congregational church was filled every night. A large choir were in their places each night, and sang those good "Gospel Hymns," (Book No. 1 was new at this time) and many hearts were reached by those songs. Over 140 found their way to the altar, and a majority of the number united with one of the three churches. While many of the number have been called "over the river," some are still found steadfast in the churches.

At the time of its organization the church consisted almost entirely of those who came from afar to establish their homes in this community. As their sons and daughters married they very frequently settled nearby, continuing in the church of their fathers. After a time, however, conditions changed. As the population increased the available farms became less and less numerous. At the same time, means of travel and communication were increasing. The disadvantages of rural life loomed larger as the advantages of urban life became more and more apparent and easy of attainment. Untried paths became suddenly attractive. Parents craved for their children a life easier than their own. Then, too, somewhat of the same spirit that had brought their fathers here now evidenced itself by sending the younger generation to new fields of activity. And as the farm homes became depleted, the activities at the center of the town declined. It is possible that these halting periods in a town's growth make for a sounder eventual success, but they most certainly make many changes in a church roll. No one can well deny that the first obligation of a church is to its own community, but still less can a charge of failure be laid against an organization which has, year after year, been giving earnest Christian men and women to all parts of the world. With these considerations in mind, the old church records make some decidedly interesting reading matter.

It certainly should be of interest to the present generation to learn that Solomon Upson and wife, Asa Upson and wife, Rebecca Upson, Aaron Post and wife, Emery Alger and wife, Amy Clark (and probably others) are mentioned (1826) as of those who were members of the early class. In an old class book of 1841-4, we find these members named: William Clark, Harriet Clark, Thaddeus Carter, Esther Carter, Aaron Post, Naomi Post, Amy Clark, Avery P. Clark, Avis Clark, James Roach, Mary Roach, Philander Booth, Sally Booth, Betsey Dresser, Lydia Carter, Reuben Henry, Nathan Caldwell, Gideon Mills, Jane Taylor, Eliza Alling, Samuel Curtis, Rebecca Curtis, Rebecca Upson, Betsey Clark, Francis Dawson, Thomasina Dawson, Lucretia Henry, Betsey Dennison, Melissa Hammond, Caroline Richardson, Samuel Conant, Agnes Conant, Ephraim Cook, Eliza Cook, Alvin Graham, Sarah P. Wilson, M. A. Curtice, Polly Curtice, Spencer Parmelee, Mary Beeman, Sarah Scott, Heman Merriam, Wm. Southworth, Sarah Dresser, Willard Dewitt, Elizabeth Dewitt, Nelson Hinkstone, Mabel Hinkstone, Chloe Roach, Elmore Clark, Giles H. Post, Maria Post, Wm. P. Maxam, Hannah Maxam, Timothy Taylor, George Dresser, James Norton, Ann Norton, Odell Appleby, Eliza Appleby, Noah P. Nichols, Eliza Booth, Lucy Ann Elliott, Experience Roberts, Lucy Ann Roberts, Prudence Southworth, Jeremiah French, Betsey A. Stow, Isabel Clark, Allen Bond, Alonzo Watkins, Mary Dawson, Harriet Taylor, Benjamin Elliott, Lucinda Elliott, Jehiel Beers, Almira Beers, Henry M. Chamberlain, Eli Thompson, Sarah Blake. The membership at the present time numbers about 75.

The Methodists have ever been able to find among their numbers, those who could, and would sing. In the earlier years, the pastor usually "started the tunes" and sometimes Reuben Henry led the singing. Later, Esther Carter (now Mrs. E. R. Husted of Ravenna) aided by her tuning-fork, was leader. It is very probable the first organ was purchased in the early '60's. When the choir was first organized, they occupied the front pews, with the little organ in front. Jesse Crankshaw is remembered as the first chorister, and Miss Parley Woodbury as organist. The choir later occupied the two seats at the rear of the auditorium. A space just large enough for the organ was in the center of the seat, third from the rear. Each Sunday the organ was lifted out, and carried to the front for use during the Sunday School hour. A new six-octave organ was purchased in 1875, or '76, which was used for over 20 years. After the change was made in the pulpit and rostrum in 1876-7, the choir then occupied the corner to the left of the pulpit, and is still to be found there each Sunday. A good orchestra is one of the features of the Sunday School.

The term of the Presiding Elder, or District Superintendent as he is now called, has varied in the past century from one year to six. He superintends the work of his district, and aims to visit each charge each quarter of the year. Among those who have served in this capacity on this charge, are Revs. William Swayze, Charles Elliott, Ira Eddy, W. B. Mack, William Stevens, Isaac Winans, John Chandler, Billings O. Plympton, Timothy Goodwin, H. N. Stearns, William Hunter, A. Hall, S. Gregg, Moses Hill, J. Graham, James Greer, John Tribby, A. D. Morton, Sylvester Burt, W. H. Locke, W. H. Rider, D. H. Mueller, J. W. Robbins, L. H. Stewart, E. O. Buxton, Ner W. Stroup, F. W. Luce, and this year (1916) J. S. Secret.

In reading the following list of preachers who have been associated with this charge, it should be remembered that in the early part of the century, Twinsburg was on a circuit, and two, and sometimes three, preachers were required to do the necessary work: Alfred Bronson, 1820; he was soon transferred to another circuit, and it is not given in the records as to who served the remainder of the year; Ira Eddy, 1821-3; Wm. Collins, Orin Gilmore, 1823-4; Philip Green, Wm. C. Henderson 1824-5; Robert Hopkins, 1825-6; John Crawford, Wm. R. Babcock, 1826-7; John Crawford, Cornelius Jones, 1827-8; Ignatius H. Tackett, Cornelius Jones, 1828-9; John Chandler, J. M'Lean, T. Vaughn, 1829-30; Caleb Brown, John Ferris, 1830-1; John W. Hill, 1831-2; Thomas Carr, John E. Aikin, 1832-3; Thomas Carr, L. D. Prosser, 1833-4; Ira Eddy, Asahel Reeves, 1834-5; Edward H. Taylor, John L. Holmes, 1835-6; J. K. Hallock, A. G. Sturges, 1836-7; J. K. Hallock, J. Marvin, 1837-8; W. S. Worello, J. W. Davis, 1838-9; L. M. Reeves, Ira Norris, 1839-40; Ira Norris, L. D. Williams, 1840-1; Thomas Carr, W. F. Wilson, 1841-2; Peter Burroughs, A. Reeves, 1842-3; Henry Elliott, D. M. Stearns, H. Kellogg, 1843-4; Henry Elliott, W. French, A. Norton, 1844-5; J. E. Akin, A. Reeves, J. H. Tagg, 1845-6; Peter Burroughs, 1846-7; A. Hall, 1847-9; L. Rodgers, 1849-51; A. Fouts, 1851-2; V. Lake, 1852-4; L. W. Ely, 1854-6; J. H. McCarty, 1856-8; Wm. Monks, 1858, (after a service of one and one-half years, he died March, 1860); H. P. Henderson supplied the balance of the year, and as pastor till 1861; C. T. Kingsbury, 1861-3; M. Williams, 1863-5; G. J. Bliss, 1865-7; J. B. Grover, 1867-8; B. J. Kennedy, 1868-9; E. D. McCreary, 1869-70; Alvin

Harris, 1890-4; J. W. VanKirk, 1894-6; J. F. Huddleston, 1896-9; A. C. Stockham, 1899-01; W. L. Askue, 1901-6; H. S. Chace, 1906-8; — Phillips, supply, Sept. to Dec., 1908; T. H. Kerr, Dec., 1908-9; Alfred Walls, 1909-12; A. C. Horricks, Sep., 1912, to May, 1913; R. C. Hallock, May to Sep., 1913; Garfield Morgan, 1913-4; G. T. Norris, 1914-15; Joseph Mottershead supplied till Dec., 1915; W. G. Walters, Dec., 1915-16; G. H. Crafts, 1916.

Owing to the fact that Twinsburg has been associated with other charges so much of the time, it is difficult to determine accurately the amount paid each year for pastoral support. Of later years it has averaged $500.00, aside from the use of the parsonage. For the present year, it has been placed at $750.00 and parsonage.

SOCIETIES

SUNDAY SCHOOL—The earliest records inform us the Sunday School was held only through the summer months of the earlier years. It was held in the lower room of the church, and during this time, Benjamin Elliott is remembered as superintendent. In 1858-9 it was held through the winter for the first time. Alanson Mills was then superintendent. There were six classes, 30 scholars, one Bible class, and an average attendance of 20. A report for 1878 gives 150 scholars enrolled, and an average attendance of 70. Of later years the enrollment has been near the 100 mark. Of the many who have served as Sunday School superintendents, only a few names can be given: Philander Booth, A. Mills, Wm. Clark, T. A. Carter, George Dresser, Oscar A. Nichols, John Cochrane, Thomas Cochrane, Mrs. Mary Wright, Mrs. Sarah Bennett, Mrs. J. B. Carter, Lena Carter, Dr. R. B. Chamberlin (who served 10 years), and the present supt., Mrs. S. H. Crankshaw. O. A. Nichols, whose age is 81, is undoubtedly the oldest one living of the earlier number. The school possesses a good library of about 200 volumes. The case was the workmanship and gift of the late Thomas Cochrane. His mother, Mrs. Agnes Cochrane, at her death, left a bequest of $50 for the use of the library. Another bequest of $300 was left to the church by Mrs. Eliza Alling, a part of which was for the benefit of the library.

The Bible was the first text-book used. Each scholar was expected to come to Sunday School prepared to repeat a verse, or verses of Scripture to the teacher. Then the Catechism was introduced. Lesson leaves in a few years followed, and the uniform international lesson helps were used for many years previous to the adoption of the graded work in the fall of 1909. Both are still used with satisfaction.

THE LADIES DIME SOCIETY—The Ladies Dime Society was organized in May, 1870 or '71. One of its objects was sociability, and another to raise funds for the care and decoration of the interior of the church and parsonage. The socials were held once in two weeks, till after the Baptist church reorganized in 1877, when they were held once in three weeks. It was the rule for the hostess to serve a plain supper, and each one present was expected to pay 10 cents. These socials were usually well attended, and socially and financially successful. The Society assisted, in a large measure, to cover the expense of the addition to the parsonage and many of the repairs to church and parsonage, bought the cushions, and keeps the church papered and carpeted, besides paying yearly $60.00 toward pastoral support. Mrs. Eliza Alling is thought to have been the first president. Mrs. W. E. Twerell is now president.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE—Prior to the organization of the Epworth League, the young people of the Methodist church joined with those of the Congregational church in the organization of the Christian Endeavor Society which was organized in 1887. The services were held alternately in the churches Sunday evenings. After the organization of the Epworth League, it was thought more satisfactory results might accrue from the organization of a local chapter of the Epworth League. The charter was given January 31, 1893. It is known as the Watson Chapter, No. 9361. Rev. I. J. Harris, who was pastor at this time, was instrumental in the organizing of the chapter and was its first president. For several years the League contributed $25 yearly to the support of a medical missionary worker at Chungking General Hospital, China. It also contributed toward the furnishings of a room at the Deaconess Home, Cleveland, and in many other ways has done good work.

JUNIOR LEAGUE—A Junior League was organized October 18, 1900, with Mrs. A. Stockham as superintendent, and Mrs. A. W. Elliott, assistant superintendent. There were 19 charter members and a total enrollment of 38. The meetings were held Saturday afternoons. In about a year it was discontinued.

BENEVOLENCES—The Twinsburg church has not been neglectful of people less fortunately situated. Offerings are yearly taken for the various benevolences: Missions—Foreign and Home, Freedman's Aid Society, Conference Claimants, Temperance Society, Educational Fund, &c. For missions the church has averaged to give $50 yearly for the past quarter century not including what is given by the Sunday School, and Epworth League. A Woman's Missionary Society has flourished intermittently, but as other agencies for doing missionary work were so readily available, the necessity of sustaining these societies has not been so apparent to all, as doubtless it should be.

FEDERATION—In the winter of 1916 a movement toward a possible federation of the Twinsburg churches was formally inaugurated. A committee of five each from the Congregational and Methodist churches was named to "study the religious situation in Twinsburg." After much thought and care, a plan of federation was drawn up, and after having been carefully explained to the adult persons of the town, was submitted to them for ratification or rejection. Knowing there was a feeling prevalent in the town that one church could be more effectively conducted than could two, not being willing to convey to the public the idea that the forces making for right living were possibly antagonistic, and earnestly desiring the very best of every good thing for the community, the members of this church voted in favor of federation in the ratio of four to one. The proposal, however, was rejected as there were too many who thought it best to allow the old relationship to continue.

An account of the past is valuable for the light thrown upon the future. Many problems that will arise have been solved in principle, if not in detail. Yet new ones will arise. In common with thousands of other churches, Twinsburg faces the problem of what, for want of a better name, is called the rural problem. The old New England families have disappeared, and their posterity have been rapidly disappearing. In their place have come many people from nations alien to our customs, language, religion, and community ideals. Here the matter is complicated by the proximity to a large city, and the desirability of Twinsburg as a residence section. Many adjustments will certainly be necessary, but a real church cannot be defeated in doing its real duty. If the next hundred years shall bring new duties, it is reasonable, in the light of past experience, to expect that earnest endeavor, intelligent energy, and a spirit of devotion will find the necessary solution.

TWINSBURG IN THE CIVIL WAR

Compiled by CHAUNCEY B. LANE, Co. H, 177th Reg., O. V. I.

In times of peace the real worth of a community may be determined by the spirit in which it meets difficult problems and baffling situations. But in times of national stress and peril we judge a town's true value by the response it makes to the nation's call for help.

Judged by this standard, few townships, if any, can give proof of being animated by a better spirit of sacrifice and enthusiastic patriotism than can Twinsburg during the "WAR OF THE REBELLION."

Immediately after President Lincoln's first call for seventy-five thousand troops, volunteers began to enlist from Twinsburg, a number from the township being enrolled in the first three months' service. Under successive calls by the President volunteers were forthcoming until, in all, during the war there were one hundred and twenty besides the thirteen "squirrel hunters."

In the latter part of the summer of 1861 twenty-one men went from Twinsburg and enlisted in Company K, 19th Reg., O. V. I., which was being recruited for three years' service at Alliance, Ohio. During the months of August and September of 1864, thirty-six, the largest number that enlisted from Twinsburg in any one regiment, joined Companies E and H of the 177th Reg., O. V. I., then forming at Cleveland, Ohio, for one year. Seventeen enlisted in Company E, and nineteen in Company H. A number of those enlisting at this time were only eighteen years old and took advantage of the first opportunity to enter the service as soon as their age permitted.

Soon after the beginning of the war the ladies of the township organized the Soldiers' Aid Society and held frequent meetings. This society assisted in every way possible in supplying the needs of the soldiers in camp and hospitals. No records of the work done are now available, but during the four years of war supplies were being sent to the men wherever needed.

At the time of the war Twinsburg received only one mail a day, which was carried to and from Macedonia by Mr. Salmon Nelson. At about eleven o'clock each morning as he drove up to the postoffice at Nelson's store there would be quite a crowd of people waiting for news from the front. Especially would this be the case after some great battle. Only a few daily papers were taken and it was the custom for someone who had a paper to read the news, while others listened, many of them being parents anxiously watching and waiting for the names of sons.

In the latter part of the summer of 1862 Kirby Smith, a rebel raider with a command in Kentucky, was making his presence known in successive raids, and was evidently designing the capture of Cincinnati.

So acute was the danger that Gov. Tod, on September 10, 1862, sent the following appeal through the papers to the citizens of northern Ohio:

"To the several Military Committees of Northern Ohio:

By telegram from Major-General Wright, Commander-in-chief of Western forces, received at 2 o'clock this morning, I am directed to send all armed men that can be raised immediately to Cincinnati. You will at once exert yourselves to execute this order. The men should be armed, each furnished with a blanket and at least two days' rations. Railroad companies are requested to furnish transportation for troops to the exclusion of all other business.

DAVID TOD, Governor."

To this appeal thousands of men from northern Ohio responded and among them were thirteen from Twinsburg. No muster roll of the Twinsburg Squirrel Hunters has been preserved and the names of those who went are given from memory by the only two survivors of that company now living in Twinsburg, Evelyn A. Parmelee and Herman H. Baldwin: Frank Baldwin, Herman H. Baldwin, Frank Booth, Andrew J. Foster, Tyler Hill, Evelyn A. Parmelee, Aurelius Tucker, Daniel W. Richardson, Wilbur Upson, Beverly Upson.

Other towns responded to this call and the men went to Cleveland where they met others from various townships and joined together, forming a company with Daniel W. Richardson captain. They took with them such arms as they could get. Some had muskets, others either rifles or shot-guns, but they were ready for service immediately.

The Twinsburg contingent was taken by train to Columbus, thence to Cincinnati, and from there across the Ohio River into Kentucky.

After the danger was over the men were returned to their homes, those from Twinsburg having been gone from home nearly two weeks. Governor Tod telegraphed to Secretary Stanton, "The minute men or squirrel hunters responded gloriously to the call for the defense of Cincinnati."

At the following session of the Legislature a resolution was unanimously adopted, authorizing the Governor to have lithographed and printed discharges for the patriotic men of the state who responded to the call of the Governor.

THE SQUIRREL HUNTERS DISCHARGE

Our Southern Border was menaced by the enemies of the Union. David Tod, Governor of Ohio, called on the Minute-Men of the State, and the Squirrel Hunters came by thousands to the rescue. You, Evelyn A. Parmelee, were one of them and this is your Honorable Discharge.

CHARLES W. HILL, Adj. Gen. of Ohio.

Approved by

DAVID TOD, Governor

MALCOLM McDOWELL, Major and A. D. C.

Under the act of April 14, 1863, for the reorganization of the militia of Ohio, those liable to duty in Summit County were organized into companies and regiments under command of David Tod, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the State of Ohio. Those liable under this act in the northern part of the county formed the first regiment of militia in the county of Summit.

Two companies were organized in Twinsburg for the regiment, one company being made up of those living north of the east and west road from Macedonia to Aurora, and the other those south of this road. The officers who held commissions from the governor were: Daniel W. Richardson, captain, Chauncey B. Lane, first lieutenant, Alfred Ledsham, second lieutenant, for the north company; Josiah Oviatt, captain, Earl C. Herrick, first lieutenant, William Chamberlin, second lieutenant, for the other company. Oscar A. Nichols was commissioned quartermaster of the regiment. These companies met frequently during the summer and fall on the square at the center of the township for drill in the manual of arms and company formation.

The square, so called then (now the park), made an ideal place for company movements as there was not then a tree or shrub on the whole place, just a bare common.

In the latter part of the summer the commissioned and non-commissioned officers of this and other regiments from northern Ohio went into camp in Cleveland for a week under instruction in drill in company and regimental formation. The officers were commissioned for five years and the organizations were maintained during the war to take part in the struggle if necessary, but no drilling was done after 1863.

After the close of the Civil War the patriotic citizens of the township decided to erect a monument in memory of those who had gone forth to serve their country and, if necessary, lay down their lives in defense of the flag.

An association was formed with Jonathan E. Herrick, president, Thaddeus A. Carter, treasurer and John C. Smith, secretary, with a building committee consisting of James Roach, Ethan Alling, Orrin P. Nichols, Philo Chamberlin and William A. Parks.

About $2500.00 was raised by subscription among the citizens of the township, and a contract was entered into with Levi Marble of Bedford to build the monument.

Twinsburg having an abundance of sandstone, it was decided to use this for the base of the monument, also for the foundation which is of solid sandstone, all quarried in the township. The monument, located somewhat north of the middle of the park at the center of the township, consists of the following dimensions, as recorded on a marble slab inserted in the second base on the east side:

Weight and measurement of this monument above the foundation as it now stands.

| | | | |
|-----------------|------------------|-----------------|-------------|
| 1st Base | 358½ cubic feet, | weight. | 50,549 lbs. |
| 2nd Base | 121 cubic feet, | weight. | 16,920 lbs. |
| 3rd Base | 47 cubic feet, | weight. | 6,768 lbs. |
| 7 Pieces Marble | 100 cubic feet, | weight. | 18,120 lbs. |

Total 626½ cubic feet. Weight.92,357 lbs.

The first base was quarried out of a sheet of rock between the house and barn then owned by Gardner Parmelee, but now by Henry Garrard, three-quarters of a mile west of the center of the township. It was raised out of its bed with jack screws, loaded on moving trucks and moved in that way to the park by Mr. Henry Porter of Chagrin Falls.

The second base was quarried on land now owned by Charles Richner, and drawn to the park by teams furnished by the citizens, gratuitously. The third base was also quarried on Mr. Parmelee's land, loaded on two truck wagons and drawn by horses.

The marble furnished by the builder consists of seven pieces surmounted by a large spread eagle cut in marble and looking to the east.

On the first base on the north side in raised letters is the word "Twinsburg" and above this is "1867 Semi-Centennial year of the settlement of Twinsburg."

On the east and south side are the names of the soldiers from Twinsburg who served in the war and were alive in 1867; a complete list is given in this chapter.

On the west side: "To the memory of our patriot sons who fell during the rebellion of 1861 to 1865." These names are also given in this chapter.

The dedication of the monument July 4, 1867, was a day long to be remembered by the people of Twinsburg, it being the anniversary of American Independence, also the semi-centennial of the settlement of the township. A large tent had been put on the park, west of the monument, where the main exercises were held.

Over in the orchard northeast from the park, near where Mr. Bishop's house now stands, a big barbecue was staged. Colored cooks were secured from Cleveland for the occasion. An ox which weighed one thousand pounds was roasted whole under the direction of David Huson. An iron rod was run through the ox so that it could be turned over the hot fire. Tables were set in the orchard, ten of them, and about 500 people were present, the dinner being free to all.

Jonathan E. Herrick was president of the day with Horace P. Cannon marshal.

The Declaration of Independence was read, Hon. O. S. Griswold of Cleveland being the orator of the day. Hon. N. D. Tibbals of Akron responded to the toast: "Our citizen soldiers." Henry L. Hitchcock, President of Western Reserve College to: "Our sons who never returned." Other speakers were Dr. Henry J. Herrick, a native of Twinsburg, Rev. Sydney Bryant, Edwin Oviatt, S. A. Lane, editor Akron Beacon, and Ethan Alling. The exercises were fittingly interspersed with singing, martial and band music, and the firing of cannon.

Under the direction of Mr. Lewis Alling and Mr. Bailey extensive preparations had been made for an entertainment that evening befitting the observance of the national holiday as well as the fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of the town. But during the afternoon a violent storm razed the large tent and drenched the ground so that it was necessary to postpone that part of the celebration. Even under those disappointing circumstances it was a day never to be forgotten by those present.

Incidentally the erection of the monument led to much needed improvements on the public square. In 1867 the township trustees, Philo Chamberlin, Oscar A. Nichols, and Chauncey B. Lane, appropriated $1400.00 for improvements. Only $1100.00 was used, although much grading was done, especially on the southeastern portion. Lewis Cannon and William Parks set out most of the trees. To insure against damage by trespassers a fence was erected a little later, Edwin Barber having the contract for the work. This fence lasted for about a quarter of a century. Now the attractiveness of the park is its chief protection.

Following are the names and record of the one hundred and twenty volunteers from Twinsburg:

MEMORIAL EXERCISES

The first exercises in the nature of a memorial to those who served in the Civil War and died during the service or since were held May 30, 1870. This service was brought about by the activity of Mrs. M. J. Hopkins. She and a few other ladies made wreaths and bouquets and decorated both the Soldiers' Monument and the graves of the soldiers. This was continued until 1873 when a more extensive observance of Memorial Day was participated in by the townspeople. M. C. Reed, Esq., of Hudson, delivered the address in the Congregational Church. Since that time there has been an address given in one of the churches or on the park each Memorial Day. The ex-soldiers and the children of the town decorate the monument and the graves of the soldiers and count it time and effort well spent to honor those to whom honor is so assuredly due.

NOTE—The following sometime residents of Twinsburg were in the Spanish-American War: Elmer M. Buell, Edson Freeman, Charles Gerrard, Louis Rich, Jesse Wolfe.

Eppy Riley was in the War of 1812.

POSTOFFICE AND CIVIL STATUS

From official records we learn that Twinsburg's first postmaster was Moses Wilcox. He was appointed Mar. 28, 1825, but where the office was and how much business was done is not known. After the death of Mr. Wilcox in 1827 Mr. Ethan Alling was appointed to the position. At that time mail was received once a week from Hudson. In 1828 the total postal receipts were $36.01. With the institution of the stage line came a tri-weekly mail. In 1839 the receipts were $256.67, and in 1860 about $400.00 although postal rates had been greatly reduced. For the quarter ending Sep. 30, 1890, they were $100.01, while for the quarter ending Sep. 30, 1916, they were $176.58.

After the Cleveland and Pittsburg railway was built the mail was daily brought from Macedonia, Mr. Salmon Nelson being carrier. Later Mr. Alanson Mills held the position many years.

The first money order issued by the Twinsburg office was dated Apr. 7, 1890; Oct. 2, 1916, money order No. 17000 was issued. The money order receipts totaled $542.06 during September, 1916.

In July, 1903, a rural free delivery route was established with Mr. O. P. Nichols as carrier. He was succeeded in 1908 by his son, Bela F. Nichols.

There are now two mails each day bringing an average of 334 pieces of first, 246 of second, 161 of third, and 17 of fourth class mail.

Following is a list of Twinsburg postmasters with dates of their appointments: Moses Wilcox, Mar. 28, 1823; Ethan Alling, Oct. 24, 1827; Edwin T. Richardson, Nov. 2, 1839; George H. Alling, Jan. 6, 1851; S. D. Kelly, July 9, 1853; Alonzo L. Nelson, Jan. 17, 1855; Hector Taylor, May 27, 1861; George Stanley, Apr. 1, 1868; William McKinney, July 19, 1871; Sherman Lane, Dec. 13, 1880; Fred D. Barber, Nov. 3, 1885; Seth R. Hanchette, Apr. 27, 1889; Alonzo L. Nelson, July 24, 1893; Bert Chamberlin, Jan. 30, 1897; Albert W. Elliott, Jan. 17, 1901; Roy W. Nichols, Oct. 21, 1908; Albert W. Elliott, Dec. 2, 1911.

It is quite probable that since 1831 the postoffice has always been located immediately overlooking the northern portion of the public square, and for over twenty years in its present location.

CIVIL STATUS

The people of Twinsburg have never been conspicuous as seekers of office and, consequently, Twinsburg has not been represented in public office so much as some other towns, this tendency being emphasized by the fact that the county seats have both been rather distant.

At the time of the organization of the new county of Summit, April, 1840, Mr. Augustus E. Foote was elected as a county commissioner, and re-elected that fall for the regular three year term. In the numerous adjustments necessary at that critical time Mr. Foote rendered efficient service. He was also a representative in the state legislature in 1843-4.

Another county commissioner from Twinsburg was Nelson Upson, elected in 1860, re-elected in 1863, resigning the office in March, 1866.

Orrin P. Nichols, one of Twinsburg's prosperous farmers, also a successful lumberman in western Pennsylvania and northern New York, was elected representative to the state legislature in 1875. He died April, 1877, before the expiration of his term of office, lamented by his colleagues and fellow townsmen.

William McKinney, one of Twinsburg's "soldier boys," and at the time of his election, Twinsburg's postmaster, was elected in 1880 county sheriff, and re-elected in 1882. Throughout his four years of service he was assisted by Evelyn A. Parmelee, a comrade from Twinsburg, as deputy sheriff.

Horace P. Cannon was in 1859 made president of the Summit County Agricultural Society, and in 1863 was re-elected to that office which he filled with characteristic zeal.

The present township officers are: Township trustees, Dr. L. G. Griste, William Fee, Ransom Tyson; clerk, Ellsworth J. McCreery; treasurer, Edward Crouse; constable, S. H. Crankshaw; superintendent of roads, V. R. Hempstead; notaries public, A. J. Brown and Dr. R. B. Chamberlin.

TRAVEL AND TRANSPORTATION

Could the early settlers be permitted a glance over Twinsburg's present highways the most familiar and, at the same time, strangest of sights would meet their eyes. Most familiar because to most people the roads suggest the location of well remembered places and strangest because of the undreamed of vehicles that speed to and fro upon these same old roads.

This matter of travel and transportation was the first real difficulty to confront Twinsburg's prospective settlers. How could they reach this new place in far-off Ohio? Some answered the question as did Luman Lane and Hanford White by walking, carrying their packs upon their backs. Zenas Alling, Gideon Thompson and Lewis Alling (12 years of age) traveled at the rate of twenty-two miles each day with a large drove of sheep. Most of the women and children came behind slow moving oxen. Jesse Pratt drove "a team of a yoke of oxen and a horse." Some had horses but, judging from the experience of Mr. Nestor Hurlbut, the advantage was somewhat doubtful. Mr. Hurlbut walked the entire distance between Goshen, Conn., and Twinsburg five times. When about to leave Goshen on his last trip he made a wager with a man about to start on horseback that he would beat him to Twinsburg. By traveling more hours each day Mr. Hurlbut managed to make equal progress with the man on horseback and, when nearing the end of his journey, noticed both horse and rider showing signs of fatigue. Mr. Hurlbut then put forth extra effort and actually arrived in Twinsburg six hours ahead of his competitor.

So accustomed to walking were these hardy men that they did not hesitate to undertake long trips frequently, nor did they shrink from carrying heavy loads. It was told of Isaiah Humphrey that he purchased an old-fashioned heavy bull-nosed plow in Richfield, shouldered it and walked with it the entire distance (15 miles) to Twinsburg without stopping to rest. Even that task seems easier than to pay the transportation charges of those days. The Allings paid $16.00 per cwt. on a box of log chains, wedges, drag teeth, etc., sent from New Haven to Cleveland.

Probably the oxen would now appear no more unusual than the conveyances of early times. For several years wagons were very uncommon, and for many years there were none at all in the northern portion of the township. Rude sleds were used both summer and winter. What were called sap-boats were used in hauling grists to mill, bringing supplies from neighboring towns, taking the families to church and social gatherings, and for numerous other purposes. They were made of long flat puncheons turned up at the front, held together by strong cleats and wooden pins. Frequently chairs were provided for the elders while the children managed as children always know how. Sometimes they rode behind in sap-troughs fastened to the sap-boat. These sap-troughs were made of halves of short sections of large logs, hollowed on the inside and hewed sufficiently flat on the outside to prevent rolling.

For a long time all wagons were destitute of springs. The spring wagon was the predecessor of the buggy. Covered vehicles were heavy, cumbersome affairs till some little time after war time. The first automobile owned by a citizen of Twinsburg was the property of Jay Brewster about ten years ago. Now there are about sixty automobiles owned here.

One ceases to wonder that pedestrianism was so common when attention is drawn to the fact that the earliest "roads" were only paths blazed through the forests. Naturally it was some considerable time before the roads could receive much attention as each man was obliged to clear as much land as possible for his own use. We are told that in the summer of 1821 the men living on the Solon road bound themselves to labor on the road each alternate Saturday afternoon or pay two quarts of whiskey. We are not definitely told to whom payment was to be rendered, but it is not inconceivable that the workers were willing to give a neighbor an occasional "afternoon off." A few years later, after much difficulty had been experienced in crossing Tinker's creek (named by Gen. Moses Cleveland after Joseph Tinker, one of his assistants) a bridge over forty rods long was built across it. This lasted several years. Trees were frequently felled across the creek for a means of passage.

It is not strange that roads were built only where really necessary. It was natural that there should be a road from north to south crossing an east to west road at the center of the town. Cleveland to the northwest and Loomis' Mills, Ravenna and Pittsburg to the southeast necessitated the road diagonally crossing the town. Other roads were built to make the more remote parts of town accessible. The fact that Twinsburg was platted by several owners, and that none too accurate instruments were used may account for some irregularities in width and direction of the secondary roads. A study of the map appended may prove interesting to one concerned in this subject. The free turnpike was mostly built by the owners of the land through which it passed, Mills and Hoadley across theirs and Champion across his. The latter asked $4.00 per acre for land abutting the turnpike and $3.00 for that which did not touch it. The turnpike cost about $3000.00 and was free to all travel. The roads of early times were fenced with rails that would be an extravagance now.

In the spring of 1828 Ethan Alling and Jabez Gilbert bought the stage property from Hudson to Cleveland, bringing the stage line through Twinsburg instead of Northfield. This transaction brought about a tri-weekly mail and from one to five stages a day, also most of the other through travel. The venture was finally successful although Ethan Alling lost $600.00 in running the stage the first season of seven months. Much of the freight passing between Cleveland and Pittsburg was conveyed through town in "Pennsylvania teams," usually six horses drawing a large covered (Concord) wagon. The roads were sometimes so bad that these Pennsylvania teams would be two days traveling from a point one mile northwest of the square to the higher ground, near the sandmill, east of town.

Four horses were driven on the stage coaches which carried passengers and the mail. Jabez Gilbert was the most noted of the drivers. The arrival of the stage was an event, and nearly every boy in town sometime resolved to be a stage driver.

In the middle forties the citizens of Twinsburg and other towns along the turnpike built a plank road, first from Twinsburg to Bedford and, later, from the center to Hudson.

A company was formed, stock issued, and the road to Bedford built. It was in use in 1849.

No record is now available of the list of stockholders, but it is known that Ezra Starkweather and Lewis Parks were two of the directors of the company.

Anson White and Orrin P. Nichols, who had a steam sawmill just north of the present residence of Henry A. Bissell, furnished the oak and chestnut plank of which the road was constructed. Eli Thompson had the contract for the stone culverts between Twinsburg and Bedford.

While the plank road was a great improvement over the dirt turnpike, it was never a financial success. The construction of the Cleveland and Pittsburg railway in the early fifties caused a change in the mail route and through travel. Also much of the heavy teaming was diverted to the Macedonia road.

There was a tollgate about a mile northwest of the square, and a more substantial one in Bedford a mile or more over the county line. The tollgate on the Hudson road was near the town line. Toll was collected for travel on the road until the early sixties, but by that time the road had become so worn and rough that the collection of toll was discontinued. Soon the Twinsburg plank road became only a memory of the past, and remained a total loss to the stockholders.

RAILROADS

When the Cleveland and Pittsburg Railway Company was preparing to build a road between Cleveland and Pittsburg Twinsburg was along the route proposed. Naturally those who lived along the stage route did not take kindly to the plan, nor did the owners of the stage property. Others feared an undesirable class of citizens would come with the railway, some even predicting as inevitable a change in the political status of the town. At any rate, so much hostility to the plan was evidenced that the railway was finally located three and a half miles west of the center, and even at that distance its construction sealed the doom of the stage line. To this generation the matter might easily seem to have been managed with little foresight, but it is well to remember that in those days railways were so new that the people could not really know the value to a community of a good railroad.

Even then Twinsburg was destined to share in the promotion of a railway. As the C. & P. neared completion the desirability of a branch through the southern part of the county, Akron and Cuyahoga Falls, connecting with the C. and P. at Hudson became apparent to many. In order to secure this "Akron Branch," by a special act of the Legislature March 24, 1851, authority was given the county commissioners, with consent of the legal voters, to subscribe for $100,000.00 of the stock of the company and to borrow the money on bonds not less than $100.00 each at a rate of interest not exceeding seven percent. At the special election, June 21, 1851, for the adoption of the new State Constitution Twinsburg voted against the bond issue 156 to 3. Nevertheless, the measure carried and for twelve or thirteen years Twinsburg helped build what since 1881 has been known as the C. A. & C. R. R.

But until 1880 Twinsburg was without a railroad. A few years prior to that time surveys were made for what was known as the Waddell line and some grading was done. Evidence of this can still be seen both east and west of North street a few rods north of the square. However the project was abandoned and it is very difficult to obtain much reliable information concerning it.

In 1880 the Connotton Valley R. R. was built, passing one-half mile east of the center. It was a narrow gauge road extending from Cleveland to Canton and on to Bowerstown in Harrison county. Later it became the Cleveland and Canton and as such was brought to standard gauge. For several years it has been known as the Wheeling and Lake Erie and has had a steadily increasing business. It is difficult to even imagine what the present condition of Twinsburg would be had not a railroad been available during more recent years. In return, Twinsburg has given a large amount of business to the railway.

The Connotton Valley railroad brought also the telegraph to Twinsburg. At first the American Rapid Telegraph Co. operated the Connotton Valley lines through Twinsburg. The Postal Telegraph Co. was the product of evolution from the Rapid, through the Bankers and Merchants and the United lines. Its first office in Twinsburg was established in 1882 with Fred D. Barber in charge. His successor was R. F. Campbell. A .W. Elliott took the office in 1891, remaining until 1908. John Leach next held the position until his tragic death from electric shock in 1913. M. McLaughlin now has charge of the work here. In 1882 there were only two wires, by 1891 there were four, two large and two small compounds, and the steadily increasing volume of business has necessitated additions. This is the first test station this side of Cleveland and is considered quite important by the company.

From time to time there have been prospects of a trolley through the township and investigatory surveys have been made, but no very earnest attempts have ever been made toward any such object.

IMPROVEMENTS

The road from Bedford to Hudson has been improved with a 14-ft. brick pavement, but except that the dirt roads receive far better care, they remain much as the early settlers left them. A short street has recently been opened running west from just south of the old Alling store to provide access to the new Crankshaw allotment.

In her hundredth year Twinsburg has seen auto bus service instituted along the old plank road. Several round trips daily are made between Hudson and Harvard Avenue, much to the satisfaction of the townspeople.

There is little doubt that the improvement of her roads is Twinsburg's greatest problem. To those who know the usual enterprise of the townspeople it may seem strange that more has not been done. However, it is no small task to construct and maintain approximately thirty miles of good roads. Climatic conditions, a varied soil, the presence of quicksand in many places and the increased traffic make dirt roads impractical at least one-third of the year. But the cost of materials and labor to construct roads that can withstand the rapid and heavy traffic now so common is prohibitive if borne by the township alone, and that the problem is not local may be readily inferred from a recent newspaper item: "In twelve hours' time Sunday (Sep. 17, 1916), 2476 autos passed a certain point on the Hudson road and an expert who knew the make and cost of the autos counted up what passed in 10 minutes and the amount was $56,000.00."

The county has aided, and probably will do so again in the construction of the main roads, but to the township those who live on the secondary roads must look for help. These roads can be improved at much less expense and at the same time be less provocative of misuse than those more extensively traveled. Much of Twinsburg's future depends upon how this problem is met. While the solution of this problem may bring new ones to be solved, it will solve some that are as old as the town itself.

HOTELS

In times long gone by travelers could not so readily pass through Twinsburg and a place to find refreshment was a necessity. Even in 1817 there seems to have been some warrant for calling the Alling's log house "Hotel Alling." Quick to discover opportunities, and perhaps mindful of the tavern his father kept on the Derby turnpike, Ethan Alling in 1825 began the construction, near the southeast corner of the square, of the town's first tavern. It was completed the next year, Mr. Alling moved in on Dec. 6, 1826, and with a Christmas ball formally opened the tavern. In the spring of 1831 he rented the tavern to Samuel Edgerly. In 1835 David Grant was the proprietor. It was probably later that he had a hotel where the present Masonic building stands. In the meantime, probably in 1830, another hotel had been built by Otis and Eli Boise. It is still standing on the east side of the square. Northwest of the square on the Bedford road, where Mrs. Boose now lives, Edwin Richardson kept a hotel as also did Park Clark. Ezra Starkweather, for many years, kept a hotel on the Cleveland road and had a flourishing business. The house still stands, being the last in Twinsburg on that road. Among those who were proprietors of the present hotel were Edwin Richardson, L. Bailey, (perhaps Messrs. Chase and Thompson,) Hiram Kelly, E. W. Clark, Granger Blackman, Messrs. Hawkins, Lewis, Luke, Nichodemus, Stein, Mrs. Betsey Clark, John Blackman and H. A. Bissell.

Mr. Elmore Clark had the longest proprietorship, from 1854 till 1885. When he took possession of the hotel, probably about November 15, his friends insisted he should give a Christmas ball. He thought it impossible as there was no barn in which the horses could be properly cared for. They replied that he could build one for the occasion. He thought the time too short but agreed to make the trial and the race with time began. The trees had yet to be felled and the lumber prepared from them. The greatest difficulty experienced was that of securing proficient "scorers." When the night of the ball arrived Edwin Barber was driving the last nail by lantern light when the first horse was brought to the barn. A record probably impossible to duplicate today!

Another unusual feature of the Twinsburg hotel is the fact that John Madden for forty consecutive years sat at the same place at the hotel table. Now in his eighty-seventh year he vividly recalls many stirring events of those earlier days.

The time is past when highways and hotels can be neglected without endangering the future of the town. Doubtless the next few years will bring great improvements to Twinsburg. Certainly if the needs and desires of the community are considered with the zeal and unselfishness our forefathers so often manifested, and with the intelligence of which the community is highly capable the following years will mean much to Twinsburg.

INDUSTRIES

It seems that most of the early settlers came here intending to make agriculture their chief pursuit, and Twinsburg has ever remained an agricultural township though never entirely destitute of industries. It would be futile and serve no real purpose to attempt any fine distinction between industrial and agricultural life and, in the early days, such a distinction was utterly impossible. Very independent were our forefathers. Few were the absolute requirements for life that they could not produce, though there were some, and it is very possible they enjoyed their hard earned independence fully as much as this generation does its luxuries.

Although they styled themselves farmers they really were, in many respects, manufacturers. From the forests they wrought lumber and made homes and rude furniture. The skill attained by many of those early woodsmen might easily seem impossible today. From the maples they obtained sap and made their maple sugar. From their sheep and cattle wool and hides were obtained and converted into garments and other coverings. From the milk butter and cheese were made. The fields produced wheat and corn which were ground into flour and meal.

But they did not carry their independence too far. They desired to establish a community, not to live each family to itself. A man could make a shelter for his family from logs, but he wanted a frame house and barn and was glad to patronize a sawmill to get them. A well filled corn or wheat bin might insure against hunger, but a grist mill served infinitely better than rude home processes in converting the grain into flour and meal. The law of demand and supply operates as well in the forest as in the metropolis. In 1817 Elisha Loomis erected a sawmill and in 1818 Elias Mather built a gristmill at the falls in the southeastern part of town. The gristmill did not enjoy a monopoly of all the grain since by 1821 Joel Thompson had a distillery in operation at the spring on the present Frank Scoutten place. It was soon abandoned because of the lack of rye.

In time other mills were erected, but those at Millsville were responsible for much of the early development of the town. With sawn lumber available the carpenter became a very busy and much sought man. Great hardware stores were a matter of the future and to the "village blacksmith" fell many tasks other than shoeing horses and oxen. Oliver Clark was the town's first blacksmith and his shop probably stood on the lot where the bank now does. When the stage route was through the town the blacksmith prospered. With sometimes as many as fifty horses stabled at the tavern barn and oftentimes almost impassable roads one can readily perceive why there were several blacksmiths in town. Probably the difficulties in transportation and the fact that the early wagons were made almost entirely of wood accounted for the presence of several wagon makers. Where the blacksmith and wagon maker flourished naturally the harness maker found plenty of employment. When the cooper and the tinner began work in town is not known, but it seems certain the requirements of early times would make the cooper a busy man. The tasks then done by the tinner were very different from those exacted of him today. The carpenter was aided in the transformation of the wilderness by the labors of the mason. Frederick Stanley was listed in 1860 as a mason. As he came to Twinsburg in 1817 he was doubtless the town's first mason. At one time Zeno Parmelee was engaged in the manufacture of brick. He lived then on the Solon road where Charles Chambers now does and planted the large sycamore tree that now stands in front of the house. Later he built a house of brick west of the present Masonic hall.

From a notice concerning "mills for sale" in the Ohio Observer in 1834 we obtain some information relating to the mills at Millsville. The gristmill is described as having two pairs of four and one-half foot burr stones, with bolting and screening machines. The sawmill is said to have a capacity of from 500,000 to 600,000 feet of lumber yearly, with twelve and a half acres of land for mill yard purposes. A frame house, springs, quarries and eighty-two acres of land are also offered for sale. The notice is signed by J. W. Wolsey for the owners in New York.

Apollos White had a sawmill on Tinker creek where the road from the Solon road to the Cleveland road crosses the creek. In the later thirties he sold the best of whitewood, ash, oak and hickory lumber at from $6.00 to $8.00 per thousand feet. Mr. Gibbs had a gristmill close by Mr. White's mill. It was later owned by Mr. Ledsham and burned in 1865. Orrin P. Nichols and Anson White ran a steam sawmill on the Cleveland road just north of the residence of H. A. Bissell. Justus Herrick operated another on the Hudson road. For many years Gideon Mills operated a portable sawmill.

Jay Brewster built a sawmill east from the hotel. He sold to George Boose who still operates it. A cidermill is worked each season also by Mr. Boose.

The old-fashioned gristmill has disappeared. In the nineties Mr. Hardin built one near the depot but it was not used long and, with some additions, has been used as feed mill and store. Luton Hanchett, W. H. Boose, E. Bowen and Bissell and Roach have successively been proprietors, the last named firm at present conducting a feed and coal business.

There came a time when it seemed that milk products could be handled collectively better than individually. Andrews and Ingersoll had dealt extensively in dairy products and H. Alling had a building for storing cheese where the town hall now stands. The building burned in 1866. In 1860 the sales from dairy products were estimated at about $75,000. The butter and cheese factory seemed the answer to the query as to how to best handle the increasing amount of milk. For several years part of the old Institute building was used as a cheese factory where sometimes the milk from fourteen hundred cows was used. Later factories sprang up in all directions. William Wilcox operated one on the Solon road, Lorenzo Riley one on Liberty street, Solomon Oviatt one at the old mills, George Haggett one on the Hudson road, the latter two being later owned by Mr. Straight. Much milk from Twinsburg was taken to the factory at the four corners on the Macedonia road, and some at another just over the line in Bedford. Now for many years most of the milk produced here has been shipped to Cleveland.

Nature was kind to Twinsburg in storing a goodly supply of sandstone both east and west of the center. From the time of the first settlement stone had been used freely, but until the C. and P. R. R. was in process of construction comparatively little went out of town. Until the Connotton Valley R. R. was built Macedonia was the shipping point of most of the stone sent outside. Here the stone lies so near the surface that it can be readily quarried and consequently many small quarries have been worked. Among those engaged in quarrying have been A. N. Stanley, Nelson Doubrava, N. Herrick, D. and C. Herrick, H. Dunsee, Gardner Parmelee and Boose Bros.

About 1882 the late C. F. Emery purchased about 16 acres of land of David McElroy and erected a mill for crushing sand. The mill has a capacity of from 130 to 140 tons per day, the sand being used in foundry work. The late William Twerell worked as engineer in this mill over twenty-five years. William Twerell, Jr., has been foreman of the quarry for twenty-seven years, making thirty-four years he has worked in the same quarry. Mr. Alfred Emery is the present owner.

In 1908 a company consisting of Ezra Atwater, George Manlove and Alfred Emery purchased of H. Chambers the old J. F. Wright farm and erected a sand and gravel mill north of the W. & L. E. depot. The sand is used in foundries and the gravel in concrete block construction. These sand-mills are Twinsburg's present greatest venture in the industrial field.

While not a manufacturing town herself Twinsburg has ever been a liberal patron of the industries of others and it may not be amiss at this point to make some mention of the business carried on in the town, though it is obviously impossible to treat the subject as fully as would be desirable.

The first store in town (1829) was the bar in Alling's tavern and the stock of goods consisted of tobacco and Scotch snuff, costing $3.50. In 1831 Mr. Alling built a house in front of where the Crankshaw home is located and the wing was used as a store. When Mr. Alling built the present Dr. R. B. Chamberlin house he moved this wing to his new location where it has since been used as a shop. In 1835 he built the store now occupied by E. J. McCreery and for the first time went to New York for goods. In 1847 he sold, exclusive of flour, salt and produce, $14,000 worth of goods. He was succeeded in business by his sons Francis A.

and George Hoadley Alling. Since the death in 1856 of G. H. Alling the building has been occupied by S. H. Bishop & Son, Bishop & Chamberlin, Wilcox & Lamb, Wm. McKinney, Messrs. Armstrong and Bull, Luton Hanchett, Seth Hanchett, Chamberlin & Tucker, L. K. Chamberlin and E. J. McCreery.

There is a vast difference between the stock carried in the first store and those of the present. To one who for the first time investigates the resources of the country general store there are many surprises. That the town can maintain two such stores, besides feed and hardware stores, is an indication of the progress made by the citizens both in culture and in material possessions.

South from the Alling store Andrews and Ingersoll had a store. Across the Cleveland road from Alling's, John Odell built a store and was for a time associated with Hector Taylor. Mr. Odell sold to A. L. Nelson. After the building burned Mr. Nelson built, on the same site, the present cement one owned by Mrs. Amanda Tucker, and housing the postoffice, telephone exchange and library. Hector Taylor built a store a few feet to the east and was in partnership with Edwin Richardson. The building now, with an additional story, stands north of the McCreery store. Next stood the old Baptist church and east of that a small building used at one time as a shoemaker's shop by R. A. Bailey, and for a time by Edward Crouse as a tinner's shop. The Baptists later acquired the Free-will Baptist church and for many years Mr. Crouse had his business housed in this old Baptist church building. His son, Edward B. Crouse, still uses it for his hardware and tinning business. Hart and Dodge had a store at the corner of the square and Solon road and south of them John and Peter Madden had their merchant tailoring establishment. Succeeding the Madden brothers were George Mizer, William Fee, Chamberlin and Tucker and the present proprietors, A. E. and G. L. Bishop. South of the Maddens' store Ed E. Parmelee had a harness business. Here also was sometimes the postoffice and the first telegraph office. On the corner, just across from the hotel, was the famous "Jimmy" Hill store. Mr. Hill built and, for a brief period, lived in the present Charles Wagner place. On the site of the old store Fred Miller erected the building now occupied by Mr. Krafton. South of the hotel lived Royal Taylor and later, Mr. James Alexander. Mr. George Boose now owns the place. Next came the building erected in 1832 by the Congregationalists, later, as part of the Bissell Institute, called "Lyceum Hall," still later used as a public school building and at present owned by Miss M. F. Alford. At the southeast corner of the square stood the Alling tavern, later also used as part of the composite Institute building. Mrs. Franklin Post now has a residence on this corner. Across the road stood the tavern barn and east of the barn Zeno Parmelee had a blacksmith shop. When a mere baby his son Henry crept from this shop to the creek and was found asleep upon a stringer of the bridge. Harrison Dunshee lived for many years on the corner diagonally opposite the tavern, his house being part of the present Masonic building. South from the corner Thomas Parmelee had a shop and next came the Abbey place, just north of W. Fee's present home. The Abbey home was considered an unusually fine house in the early days. Leverett Clark's farm came to the south side of the square, his barn stood about where the M. E. church now does and his house farther east. On the west side of the square Zeno Parmelee had a blacksmith shop just east of where the Congregational church stands, keeping three or four men employed throughout the year. The shop on the west road, for many years operated by Moses Roach and at present by Adam Stingel, was once Mr. Parmelee's. What was built for a Free-will Baptist church, later acquired by the Baptists and now used as a town hall on the Cleveland road, once stood north of the present Crankshaw place. East of the N. C. Dodge home stood James Alexander's shop. Many of the buildings on the west side of the square encroached upon the public ground and had to be moved farther west. For some years George Andrews and Nathan Chapman had a wagon shop in the building at the rear of A. N. Roach's residence. Across the street from the old hotel barn stood William Judd's blacksmith shop, later operated by J. W. Harlow. J. P. Garzee was another of Twinsburg's blacksmiths, as also was Jas. Fisher and, more recently, Robert McManus.

On the north side of the square the houses now occupied by Mr. Carpenter and Mr. Keever were once the homes respectively of Aaron and Moses Wilcox. The former was also for many years the home of Hector Taylor.

The Twinsburg of 1917 has little more of manufacturing than did the Twinsburg of 1817. Some lumber is sawed during the winter months by those who still have timber, but most of the lumber used is shipped here from far-away points. Flour is purchased at the stores, even meat being mostly shipped in. The milk, or cream, is nearly all sent to Cleveland; cattle, poultry, eggs, fruits, vegetables, wheat and other commodities are sent out of town and much of the money derived from their sale used to foster industries elsewhere. The standards of living are becoming more urban than rural. In short, Twinsburg is practically a suburb of a large industrial city. Surrounded by a thriving agricultural and dairying community, indirectly she plays well her part in the industrial field. A superior citizenry is already hers and she is well content to furnish peaceful homes and necessary supplies to those embroiled in the ceaseless whirl of industrial life.

PROFESSIONAL LIFE

Perhaps no violence would be done truth by stating that Twinsburg's professional men have been her teachers, preachers and physicians. Yet such a statement might convey an entirely wrong impression regarding the attitude of the townspeople toward professional life.

There were no professional men among the earliest settlers. Such a condition would now seem intolerable, but it was usual and almost inevitable in early sparsely settled communities. It is an additional evidence of the character and training of the pioneers that they keenly felt this lack and sought to remedy it. The needs of the sick and suffering first spurred the people to action.

When the first resident physician, Dr. William O'Bryan, came to Twinsburg we do not know except that it was after 1823, and even in 1831 Dr. Town, of Hudson, was Twinsburg's nearest physician. In the early times Twinsburg depended upon Drs. Israel Town and Oliver Mills, of Hudson, when severe sickness manifested itself. At a later date Drs. Selby and Stevens were here and by 1860 the town had four physicians: Seymour A. Collins, John G. Stearns, A. P. Clark and S. A. Freeman. Of this group only Dr. Seth A. Freeman remained long in active practice here. In his early manhood he was an expert worker in iron, working in the large carriage shops of Lowman of Cleveland and later, here in the blacksmith shop of J. W. Harlow. While still working at his trade he began alone the study of medicine and after taking one course of lectures began his long practice. He died in 1902 after a very active life, his ability recognized far beyond his home town by both the laity and the medical profession.

Dr. Luman G. Griste came to Twinsburg in 1871, began practicing medicine in 1872 and completed his medical course in 1874. Mrs. Griste studied with her husband and has shared with him the labors over an extensive territory where they have made for themselves a host of grateful and devoted friends. It may with propriety be here mentioned that the entire Griste family have been engaged in professions. Their daughter, Mrs. Ethel Griste Viall, besides being an accomplished musician is also a successful teacher, and their son, the late Lemar Griste, at the time of his death in 1902 as a chemist was employed by the Mineral Point Zinc Co. of N. Chicago as superintendent. Furthermore, Mrs. Griste is a sister of the late Dr. S. A. Freeman. Altogether a record, not frequently excelled!

Dr. R. B. Chamberlin graduated from the dental department of Western Reserve University in 1901 and began practicing here as a dentist. The study of disease and medicine was, however, so attractive to him that he continued his studies, graduating from Cleveland Medical School in 1904. He has a rapidly increasing practice and as much dental work as he can spare time for.

When compared with other towns that have no resident physicians Twinsburg is exceedingly well favored, being able also to easily obtain specialists from Cleveland when it is desirable.

Among the teachers in the public schools there have been comparatively very few who could be properly called professionals. Most of the teachers in the earlier schools were young folk who saw in teaching an opportunity to earn a little—and the word is used advisedly—money and to whom teaching was an incident, not a goal. Since the establishment of the high school and the reorganization of the school system the condition has changed. As the founder of the Bissell Institute the Rev. Samuel Bissell was a shining example of the value to a community of a man dedicated to the cause of education.

As a pastor Rev. Mr. Bissell was the first resident minister in the town. Previous to 1828 Rev. Mr. Seward of Aurora, Rev. Mr. Hanford of Hudson, and the Methodist circuit riders had been relied upon for preaching services. In other chapters concerning the schools, churches and music the reader has learned of the faithful services of Twinsburg's preachers and teachers.

But Twinsburg has done better than to provide homes and work for professional men. She has trained the youth entrusted her and sent them far away, but always calls them hers. The names of men long gone from here, such as McKenny, White, Fairchild, Kerruish, Marvin, Voris, Ingersol, Knowlton, Wilson, Pokagon and Hazen link Twinsburg forever with professional life.

Since the passing of the old Institute and the multiplication of special schools the public schools have simply provided a good foundation and the inspiration for specialization. Many students have gone from Twinsburg to institutions of higher learning, such as Adelbert College, Western Reserve University, Case, Oberlin, Wooster, Mt. Union, Erie, Hiram, Dennison, Valparaiso and other colleges with the purpose of taking up some profession. It would be impossible to mention all but among them are J. C. Blackman, C. W. Hempstead and Charles Jones in ministerial work; W. H. Gillie, Harvey Brenizer and Albert Chapman practicing law; W. P. Chamberlin, R. B. Chamberlain and J. O. Nelson practicing medicine; Mrs. Ethel G. Viall, Mrs. Lenora L. Pascoe, Clare B. Hempstead and Harry Carrier teaching, and Clyde Cochran as electrician; Roy Stingel, a teacher of pharmacy at Case School, W. S. Lister, attorney-at-law in Cleveland, and P. P. Evans, consulting engineer, make Twinsburg their home.

As facilities for easy travel between Cleveland and Twinsburg are increased probably many will avail themselves of homes in Twinsburg and it is hoped a goodly number of the town's own sons and daughters may be among the number.

TWINSBURG'S FIGHT FOR TEMPERANCE

MRS. MARY FESSENDEN

History tells us that the first mills erected in Twinsburg were a sawmill in 1817, a gristmill in 1818, and a distillery in 1821. We also are told that the whiskey was carried away in gallon bottles as fast as it ran from the pipes. However, on account of the difficulty in obtaining rye, this distillery did not long continue in operation.

That first distillery and whiskey bottles have caused Twinsburg a deal of trouble. Liquor drinking was made popular by the fact that liquor was served at all house and barn raisings. As the population increased business also increased. For years liquor was free to be bought or sold at the stores and no questions asked. At the close of the Civil War the U. S. government put a revenue on liquor, and later the state required the vendor of liquors to have a license.

Intemperance seemed to be on the increase everywhere and there was great agitation all over the country regarding it. There began to be organizations in our own town. The "Sons of Temperance" did good and faithful work to down the monster, but it had gotten an iron grasp on Twinsburg. The people became alarmed and went to work with a will. They knew it would be a hard pull, and a long pull, but they were confident victory would finally crown their efforts. We already had a few laws that, if enforced, would help our condition.

The building on the corner across from the hotel was owned by Mr. James Hill who kept a store of general merchandise, both dry and wet goods, and curiosities of all description. Surely Dickens would have called it another "Old Curiosity Shop." Mr. Hill was a unique character and everything in the building was characteristic of himself. On the first floor were dry goods and all sorts of implements and notions; in the basement were all kinds of wet goods; wines, whisky, brandy, rum and New Orleans molasses. In 1872 Mr. Hill died and Mr. A. L. Nelson was appointed administrator. All the goods were sold except the wet goods which were removed to the stone store on the northwest corner of the square. Here they were sold and the supply replenished as soon as necessary. It was not long before there began lively times in the old town of Twinsburg. Old men, young men and even boys were soon drawn into the vortex. Mothers began to be alarmed for their sons, and wives for their husbands. In the meantime the proprietor had purchased the Hill building and fitted it up for a saloon and soon had men behind the bar dealing out intoxicants. For some time this was the only place in town where the nefarious business of selling liquor was carried on for the purpose solely of making money.

This business affected not only our own town, but the surrounding country felt the baneful influence of the Twinsburg saloon. Topers would drive into town and their horses would stand for hours, pelted by the merciless storms, while they, inside, were preparing for the doom that surely awaited them. I would here assure my readers that I know whereof I speak for I have lived to see the awful results of that saloon.

The ladies of Twinsburg, thinking it time to have something done to stay the tide of intemperance in our own town, and stimulated to action by the success of our sisters in other places, resolved to do all they could toward the suppression of this growing evil. Several meetings were held before any society was formed. A permanent organization was talked of and it was finally decided to have a society with a constitution and officers. A committee was appointed to draft a constitution, and a meeting was appointed for April 8, 1874, in the M. E. church. This meeting, which opened with singing and prayer, was largely attended. The proposed constitution was read, accepted and signed by sixty ladies. Thus the "Ladies' Temperance League of Twinsburg" came into existence. A pledge was drawn and circulated. Out of a population of seven hundred only two hundred and eighty signatures were secured. This result was partly due to the fact that so many were ardently attached to the use of hard cider kept by many of our citizens who would not discard it from their cellars.

Nevertheless the temperance ball was kept rolling. The League's prayer meetings were held every week interspersed with lectures and mass meetings. Special days devoted to prayer and fasting were well observed. It is a duty and a privilege to give special mention of the great help and encouragement the League received from our pastors, Rev. Mr. Ely of the M. E. church, Rev. Mr. Post of the Congregational church, and Rev. Mr. Thompson and Rev. Mr. Hall of the Baptist church, and their wives; also the noble women of whom were Mrs. S. M. Bissell, Mrs. J. North and many others who were equally faithful. These pastors spared themselves neither day nor night, preaching in their pulpits, recommending and trying to secure speakers, working among the men, rallying the people for the public lectures and mass meetings. During this time no opportunity was lost to endeavor to persuade the proprietor of the saloon to abandon his ungodly business. Time after time our League sent a delegation to plead with him, but it seemingly was useless. He claimed that he was in a legitimate business, that he was a benefit to the town, that he helped the government, and, furthermore, that one cause of intemperance was "the over anxiety of mothers for their sons," it "having a tendency to destroy their manhood." He said he found nothing in the Bible that forbade the selling of liquor. He expressed his willingness to have the ladies visit him again but intimated the closet was a more suitable place to pray for him than any public place. The ladies promptly assured him the closet had not been neglected in importuning the aid of a Higher Power in his behalf.

So the women of Twinsburg worked on, prayed on. The battle was on, the crusade never faltered. They never lost sight of the object for which they worked and prayed.

An appeal had been prepared and circulated throughout the town. This appeal, signed by one hundred and eighty-two ladies was presented to the proprietor of the saloon and he was asked to sign the Druggists Pledge. He declined. He was then asked if he would be willing to have services held in his store. He said he would like it very much as it would be something new. A selection from the Bible was read, a hymn sung, a number of prayers offered, all joined in singing "Nearer, my God to Thee" and the ladies passed out, feeling their labors and prayers were in vain. Yet we still remembered that God is ever in his watch-tower.

At our annual meeting May 11, 1877, a resolution was adopted that the name of this society be changed from "Ladies' Temperance League" to "Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

About this time five men were appointed to secure speakers for the evening mass meetings. The following were some of the speakers secured: Rev. Mr McRoot of Hudson, O., Rev. Josiah Strong, Hudson, O., Jay O. Dell, Cleveland, Mr. Dissette, Cleveland, Senator Goodhue, Akron, O., Judge Marvin, Akron, O., and Captain Fishure, Akron, O. The influence of these lectures were good and great and everlasting. The workers were encouraged, the work began to be more popular and some who had been indifferent began to climb into the temperance water wagon.

In May, 1878, a wave of the Murphy movement reached us. We had public meetings nearly every evening for a number of weeks. The work was carried on under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., assisted by the five men who secured the speakers. May 3, 1878, Elder Early of Bedford and Mr. Flick of Newburg spoke of the reformation and work of Mr. Murphy. It was a most impressive service. One hundred signed the pledge and wore home the badge. The help received from our pastors was a remarkable factor in forming public sentiment during this crusade. It was the general thought and expression that no legislation had ever succeeded in making men good, the reform must come from within. A prayer made by one of our pastors will never be forgotten by those who heard him. He prayed thus: "O God, we pray Thee that, if it is possible, we pray Thee, convert the saloon keepers; but if it is not possible, we pray Thee to sweep them off the face of the earth. Amen." This minister was the father of three nice boys who were daily exposed to the awful influence of the Twinsburg saloon.

State legislation had placed some restrictions upon liquor selling, especially as to selling on Sundays and to minors and habitual drunkards. Our people were convinced that liquor was being unlawfully sold in Twinsburg, yet they could obtain no evidence.

Forbearance ceased to be a virtue and two of our men went to Cleveland and secured two or three secret service men to come and board at the hotel. If I remember rightly they came as stone contractors, there being a number of stone quarries being worked at that time. The detectives spent most of their time loafing about the saloon and soon found out just what they were expected to learn, namely, that liquor was being sold on Sunday and that habitual drunkards, minors, and anybody with the price could obtain liquor. As a result the whole saloon squad was arrested, taken to Akron, tried and convicted—and in some slick way skipped the country. For the latter condition of affairs Twinsburg was, for several reasons, very thankful.

I am reminded of an incident of about this time. We were planning and preparing for a big temperance rally to be held soon. Brother Charles Lane said to me, "Mrs. Fessenden, you women have been singing and praying for years. Now there is going to be something doing." "Yes," said I, "that is just what we have been doing—praying that you men might take a little interest and responsibility in this reform work. And now, don't you see, our prayers are being answered?" "Well," said he, "I guess that is so."

Twinsburg began to realize what a blessing it was to be rid of a saloon and the accompanying disgrace. The reform work went on. The W. C. T. U. kept the subject before the people by holding special meetings and conventions. Much credit is due the good men who were a great help in every effort for reform. There began an agitation to hold an election under the Local Option law. Finally the election was held and Twinsburg was voted "dry" and has ever since continued dry.

Twinsburg has a priceless heritage in the devoted service of the Christian sisters who labored so faithfully in the days now passed.

The W. C. T. U. has been fortunate in having faithful workers enter the ranks year after year, until now we have a strong and flourishing organization. When the three churches were in a prosperous condition it was the custom to elect an officer from each church. In 1893 Mrs. A. J. Brown was elected second vice president from the Baptist church, and in 1897 was elected president of the Union, and as such she has continued most of the time since, ever faithfully keeping before us the object of our organization. Mrs.

Ethel Twerell and Mrs. Sadie Twerell have since both been presidents of the Union.

Of those who belonged to the first organization only three have continuously maintained their membership. They are Miss Nellie Dodge, Miss Sabra Dodge and Mrs. Mary Fessenden.

SOCIETIES

THE TWINSBURG FAIR

The people of Twinsburg and adjoining townships, being largely interested in agriculture and dairying, decided, in the early fifties, to hold a local fair for the display of the results of their labors.

The first Twinsburg fair was held in the fall of 1853 on the public square at the center of the township. A large tent was erected at the northwest corner of the square where the main display of agricultural products was made and the remainder of the ground was used for the live stock on exhibition.

There being no fence enclosing the exhibit, in order to finance this township fair, men were stationed at the corners of the square where the different roads centered, and pay was collected of the farmers and others as they came to the exhibition.

This form of fair was continued for two or three years, and attracted more than local interest. As a result, Twinsburg, Hudson, Northfield, Solon, Aurora, Bedford, Bainbridge and Streetsboro joined together and formed the "Union Agricultural Society."

Grounds were purchased consisting of nearly thirteen acres of land a short distance east of the center between the roads to Aurora and the depot, and were fitted up with buildings, a trotting track, judges' stand and all the necessary fixtures for a successful display of the products of the territory included in the society.

The first fair held on the new grounds, September, 1856, was a great success, both in the variety and large number of articles on exhibition, and in the attendance which was much larger than expected.

These fairs were continued for about fifteen years attracting a large number of people who came to view the exhibits and who enjoyed meeting the exhibitors and their friends. In the later sixties, some of the most active promoters, having moved away, and others having died, it was decided to discontinue the meetings and the last fair was held in 1871.

The grounds were sold in 1872 to Albert N. Stanley, the affairs of the society were closed, and the "Union Agricultural Society" remains now only a memory to the older citizens of Twinsburg and adjoining townships.

At present there are six dwelling houses on the grounds where the Twinsburg Fair formerly was held each year.

THE FEMALE BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION

The history of Twinsburg would not be complete without mention being made of the philanthropic work of the Female Benevolent Association. A band of ladies met on January 31, 1855, and organized this society. Its object was to supply pecuniary aid to the local destitute poor, and to aid in the several benevolent objects of the day. Their Preamble reads thus: "Whereas, the various objects of Benevolence urge constantly increasing efforts, and demands upon the Christian public for the enlarged exercise of their charity, both at home and abroad, and wishing to exert our ability for the relief of the suffering, and for the evangelization of the world—

"And whereas, we believe that by uniting our labors we may not only accomplish much more real good, and at the same time benefit ourselves by cultivating the social affections, and creating a greater harmony of feeling and interest, we the ladies of Twinsburg organize ourselves into a Benevolent Association, or Sewing Society."

The membership fee was twelve and one-half cents, payable annually, and "the contribution of such work as they are able to perform at their regular meetings once in two weeks." Besides the membership fee, the ladies contributed ready-made garments, or material for them. The records tell us in one year 88 garments were made.

Besides lending assistance to the needy of the town, boxes of clothing were sent annually to one of the following named benevolent institutions: Home Missionary Society, Indian Orphan Society, American Female Guardian Society, Girls Industrial School. The total value of the boxes sent amounted to nearly $230, and averaged over $32. The existence of this Association was only seven years, but it can be readily seen these ladies did valiant work. The first officers elected were: Mrs. (Rev.) J. H. Scott, pres., Mrs.

H. Cannon, vice pres., Mrs. J. W. Dodge, sec'y., Mrs. J. N. Higley, treas.; managers, Mrs. G. H. Alling, Mrs. J. Herrick, Mrs. J. T. Herrick, Mrs. L. Parks, Mrs. F. Sheldon, Mrs. G. Stanley, Mrs. S. Stephens, Mrs. L. Cannon. It is of interest to read the names of those who were members. Besides those named as officers, there were Mrs. Lewis Alling, Mrs. Ethan Alling, Mrs. Wm. Andrews, Mrs. A. Atwater, Mrs. S. Bentley, Mrs. S. Bissell, Mrs. E. B. Bissell, Mrs. Sanford Bishop, Mrs. A. V. Bishop, Mrs. David Bissell, Mrs. Bryant, Mrs. I. Cannon, Mrs. E. Crouse, Mrs. Burton, Mrs. S. A. Collins, Mrs. Jane Chamberlain, Mrs. Cochrane, Mrs. J. P. Garzee, Mrs. E. Herrick, Mrs. D. Herrick, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. B. C. Herrick, Mrs. Augustus Herrick, Mrs. N. Herrick, Mrs. J. M. Hart, Mrs. M. Holmes, Mrs. J. Lane, Mrs. Chauncey Lane, Mrs. Matherson, Mrs. A. L. Nelson, Mrs. Silvia Parmelee, Mrs. J. R. Parmelee, Mrs. Wm. Porter, Mrs. D. W. Richardson, Mrs. S. Redfield, Mrs. L. Riley, Mrs. S. Richard, Mrs. E. Starkweather, Mrs. Dr. Stevens, Mrs. Spencer, Mrs. E. S. Smith, Mrs. C. O. Stimson, Mrs. H. Taylor, Mrs. S. G. Trembath, Mrs. E. Thompson, Mrs. White, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Wm. Wilcox, Mrs. H. Young, Misses M. Beardsley, S. Beardsley, Lucia Bissell, Laura Bissell, A. Gilbert, Delia Hart, Caroline Herrick, Esther Herrick, C. Lane, Harriet Lane, Lucy Mills, M. E. Parmelee, Lizzie Parks, Maria Quigley, Dolly Gove. Only two of these members are living in town at the present time, viz.: Mrs. L. Cannon, and Miss Maria Quigley.

Another society called the Soldiers Aid Society was organized about 1861, which caused a division in the efforts of the ladies, and in April, 1862, "the Societies postponed for a time."

SUMMIT LODGE No. 213, F. & A. M.

Among the enduring institutions of Twinsburg should be mentioned the "Old Masonic Lodge" which for over half a century has contributed to the fraternal spirit of its many loyal members.

In the early fifties a dispensation was granted to a certain few Freemasons who held memberships in lodges of the New England States and, having come as pioneers to Twins-burg, desired to form a new lodge here. These brethren, after holding meetings under dispensation for some time, applied for a charter of the Grand Lodge. In 1856 a charter was granted them with the following Twinsburg pioneers as charter members:

S. A. Andrews, G. H. Alling, W. Crankshaw, Silas Oviatt, Solon S. Lacy, Hector Taylor, W. H. Andrews, Henry Boswell, John Dodge and Eli Thompson.

This lodge obtained suitable rooms in the old cheese storage house situated on the Cleveland road on the lot now occupied by the present town hall. The lower rooms were used to store cheese which was undergoing the ripening process. The upper hall was for the freemasons and many strange stories have been told by outsiders of the mysterious events which often occurred in that old masonic hall.

In 1866 the hall was destroyed by fire and but for M. O' Neal all books, jewels, charter and Bible, recently presented by the ladies, would have been lost. These were taken by him to the home now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Prentiss where they were kept until the new hall was built which was completed the same fall. The new hall is the present "Old Masonic Hall" on the southeast corner of the park. It was formerly the residence of Harrison Dunshee from whom it was purchased. An addition of 24 feet was built to it and it has been used ever since for lodge purposes.

The early fifties found many chapter Masons in this locality and soon a charter was granted which was dated 1857 and a thriving chapter soon was working. These members also contributed to the erection of the new Masonic Hall and were given a third interest in it by so doing.

The charter members of this chapter which was Summit No. 74 were as follows: S. A. Andrews, A. W. Clark, A. Mills, J. W. Dodge, E. C. Holmes, O. Riley, S. Bryum, Wm. H. Andrews, A. Ingersoll, G. H. Alling.

Changes in jurisdiction of the chapter lodges necessitated the removal of this chapter some years later to Bedford where it now is located. The Blue Lodge still remained at Twinsburg where it has always been found active and fulfilling its mission to those "who seek."

The present membership of fifty-four speaks highly of the consideration that is given Masonry in so small a jurisdiction as is commonly found in the present system of cutting down size of jurisdictions by chartering new lodges. This sketch would not be complete without reference to the names of a few "Brothers" who have given years of loyal support to "Old Summit." In this relationship we mention A. P. Clark, S. A. Andrews, J. T. Hempstead, E. A. Parmelee, J. D. Scoutten, N. A. Chapman, Oliver Roniger.

JUNIOR ORDER UNITED AMERICAN MECHANICS

John Osman Baldwin

Twin City Council No. 187, Jr. O. U. A. M., should be remembered among the defunct organizations of this town, not for the things it did not or could not accomplish, but for the good and the influence it did exert in the few brief years of its existence; it is with a sense of delicacy that I write in its memoriam. This is not a history of the Order, it is only a few remarks pertaining to a worthy organization which "came and saw" and—disbanded in August, 1897.

Twin City Council No. 187, Jr. O. U. A. M., was instituted October 31, 1891, in Twinsburg, O., by Oliver H. Perry Council No. 88, of Kent, O., with about twenty-five charter members, and remained an active organization for six years. Her declaration of principles were intensely patriotic. The objects of the Order stood for the good of our common country. It was one of the finest schools of patriotism with which any young man of American birth could identify himself.

During its career in this town, it made its influence felt in many ways, and was the fountain head of the sentiment in this community which led to the placing of an American flag upon our public school building, long before there was a law in this state requiring one to be there. In fact, the Subordinate Councils of this Order were the ones who were instrumental in placing a law upon the statute books of Ohio requiring a flag to be placed upon every public school building in this state, and a Bible therein.

The Council in Twinsburg instituted Councils in Hudson, O., and in Solon, O., and assisted in conferring the work upon a Council established at Talmadge. It had delegates to all local and state meetings, supporting patriotic action and legislation. It co-operated with other Councils of like denomination in the good of our common country. It should have been encouraged and maintained, and doubtless would have been in existence today, not only in Twinsburg, but in nearly every town in our land, had not an obnoxious and inexorable funeral tax (which put nearly all the Councils in the country out of existence) been levied against them.

The Council Hall was the scene of many pleasant and inspiring meetings—many open meetings were held with good speakers in attendance. Probably one of the best and most patriotic addresses ever given in this town was delivered by Prof. A. W. Carrier, February 22, 1893. A copy of this speech may be found in the Samuel Bissell Memorial Library, Twinsburg, Ohio.

To the credit and honor of its membership it may be said they were a unit in every good and worthy cause in the community during the life of the Council. It was a worthy organization in its time, and its teachings will last indefinitely wherever its spirit has been known, fostered and nourished. In these closing days of our first century, as a town and as a people, may her old spirit of "Virtue, Liberty and Patriotism" rest upon and be with us, cementing the bond of unity among us in a stronger brotherhood in the new century to come.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The Young Women's Christian Temperance Union was organized in 1889 or 1890. Miss Jessie Elliston was president the first year of the society's existence. She was succeeded by Miss Eliza Reed who continued in that position till the organization was discontinued.

The society was incorporated and owned the building which is now the "Ink Stand." At that time the building stood just west of Mr. Crouse's hardware store.

The Y's organized a Loyal Temperance Legion with Mrs. S. R. Hanchette as superintendent.

At the time the society disbanded it had on hand a sum of money which was banked and faithfully looked after by Mrs. Carrie P. Rhodes. A part of this money was used to make possible the first lecture course and the remainder was used to defray some of the expenses of the L. T. L. and to help with other temperance activities in the town.

THE VILLAGE IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY

In the spring of 1891 the ladies of the town arranged a meeting to discuss what could be done to obtain a sidewalk from the depot to the center of the town, there being then only a dirt, or mud, walk. Consequently, April 8, 1891, Mrs. W. C. Prentiss posted notices for a meeting in the town hall.

That the people were really interested was proven by a well filled house. A society was organized as "The Twinsburg Improvement Society." Membership was contingent only upon the payment of twenty-five cents yearly. The officers elected were: Pres., Mrs. W. C. Prentiss, Treas., Mrs. Sada Greer, Sec., Mrs. Sarah C. Bennett.

For five years this society gave a social or entertainment once every three weeks. The town was canvassed and every one given an opportunity to help by giving either money or labor. About $800.00 in cash was gotten in the five years. Many availed themselves of the opportunity to donate their labor and the work progressed favorably until there was a good walk from the east side of the park to the depot, and another from the southeast corner of the park to the school grounds.

Upon this accomplishment of the object of its organization the society ceased its labors, having faithfully earned the gratitude of all who have profited by the untiring zeal of "The Twinsburg Improvement Society."

THE VICTORIA WOMAN'S CLUB

The Victoria Woman's Club is one of many proofs that the women of the town have been alert and faithful in making the best use of their opportunities. On the afternoon of February 6, 1903, a group of ladies met at the home of Mrs. S. R. Hanchett and organized a "Woman's Club of Twinsburg." The following named women were present at the meeting: Mrs. W. L. Askue, Mrs. E. B. Crouse, Mrs. Bert Chamberlin, Mrs. L. K. Chamberlin, Mrs. R. B. Chamberlin, Mrs. A. W. Elliott, Mrs. S. H. Hull, Miss Hattie Lane, Mrs. A. T. Reed, and Mrs. Frank Twerell.

The object of this club was agreed to be, primarily, the improvement and development of its members. A careful perusal of its published programs gives conclusive evidence that this high and worthy objective was never forgotten. The first regular meeting was held February 27, 1903.

The following October the name was changed to "The Victoria Woman's Club," and a constitution and by-laws adopted. Mrs. Bert Chamberlin, Mrs. Askue and Mrs. Hull constituted the committee on constitution and by-laws. They and the following were charter members: Mrs. L. K. Chamberlin, Mrs. E. B. Crouse, Mrs. S. R. Hanchette, Miss Hattie Lane, Mrs. A. T. Reed, Mrs. A. Stingel and Mrs. Frank Twerell.

The meetings were held the first Friday afternoon of each month, the programs consisting of music, papers upon interesting and profitable subjects, and current events. Usually one of the summer meetings took the form of an outing at some favorite resort, and one of the mid-year programs was open to guests.

Mrs. A. T. Reed was the first president and her able leadership did much toward the success of the club. After her departure Lena M. Carter, Mrs. L. K. Chamberlin and Mrs. L. G. Bean were presidents.

The subjects studied during a course of years were of some considerable latitude. Aside from miscellaneous topics some special study was given to American institutions and government, authors and people of note, Ohio, England, Russia, Japan, Scandinavia, the Great Northwest, the Southland, the different races, Mormonism and domestic economy, special attention being given to current affairs.

It is very possible that the same elements that contributed to the success of the organization may have brought about its discontinuance. In 1912 so many members found themselves unable to give the requisite time to the work of the coming year that it was deemed advisable to discontinue the club, provision being made, however, for its resumption should such a course at a later time be considered wise.

The printed records show the ladies named below were at some time members of "The Victoria Woman's Club": Mrs. W. L. Askue, Mrs. L. G. Bean, Mrs. John Blackman, Mrs. W. R. Blackmer, Mrs. W. H. Boose, Mrs. A. W. Carrier, Lena M. Carter, Mrs. H. S. Chace, Mrs. Bert Chamberlin, Mrs. L. K. Chamberlin, Mrs. R. B. Chamberlin, Mrs. S. H. Crankshaw, Mrs. E. B. Crouse, Mrs. George Dodge, Mrs. Frank Doubrava, Mrs. B. P. Forbes, Mrs. F. D. Green, Mrs. C. E. Griffey, Mrs. S. R. Hanchette, Mrs. Jas. Harper, Mrs. V. R. Hempstead, Mrs. Leonard Herrick, Mrs. S. H. Hull, Mrs. H. J. Janson, Mrs. Frank Lane, Miss Hattie Lane, Mrs. E. J. McCreery, Mrs. A. T. Reed, Miss Eliza Reed, Mrs. Henry Reed, Mrs. C. E. Riley, Mrs. Carrie Smith, Miss Mary Stanley, Mrs. A. Stingel, Mrs. Frank Twerell, Mrs. Fred Twerell, Mrs. Will Twerell, Mrs. Lester Unger.

THE LADIES OF THE MACCABEES

A flourishing hive was organized here in 1899 by Deputy Melva Caswell. The original membership of thirteen was soon increased to fifty-three, including a team of twenty-four well drilled guards. The Great Commander once pronounced this the best country hive in Ohio. A change in assessments caused the loss of some members, and the present number of members is the same as at the organization of the hive. Death has claimed three members whose death claims were promptly paid upon presentation. Among those who have contributed largely to the activities of the hive have been the late Mrs. Charles Wilson and Mrs. A. J. Brown.

A GROUP OF INCIDENTS

THE WILCOX TWINS

It was inevitable that much of romance should connect itself with the unusual in the lives of the Wilcox twins. It is probable that much of the impossible told concerning them had some foundation in fact and there is abundant evidence that their twinship possessed some uncommon features. Mrs. Augustus Ellsworth, daughter of Aaron Wilcox, is authority for the statement that the twins were like one soul in two bodies, that what one knew the other also knew, that their agreement in opinions concerning all things reached even to politics and religion. Once when Aaron had been to Connecticut on a long visit he returned unexpectedly at night. He lived in a log house back of where Charles Wagner now lives. Moses lived in a log house opposite where Mr. Pottinger lives. A daughter of Moses went to her uncle's house and found that he had returned. She hastened home and told her father. "Yes," he said, "I know it; he came at ten o'clock last night." And so it proved, though his only means of communication was telepathy.

One can easily imagine many situations in which their remarkable likeness in appearance might have led to peculiar situations, but it seems certain that the similarity must have been in more than personal appearance, judging from this incident. At one time one of the twins could not make his usual weekly call upon the young lady he was then courting. He asked his brother to go in his place. The brother consented to do so and spent the evening very agreeably while the girl was in total ignorance as to the fact that he was not the twin who usually came.

In naming the town they perpetuated the fact of this feeling of inseparability and in the public square the people of Twinsburg have, not only a beautiful park, but a memorial of a singular psychic condition.

SHOOTING STARS

In 1833 there was a very unusual meteoric display, such as had occurred about three times in the preceding century. The people on the Solon road were more religious than scientific. At least they believed in preparedness and, thinking the end of the world had surely come, they gathered at Aaron Post's, where Charles Schmalzle now lives, and held a prayer meeting. Orrin Tucker lived next door, where Mrs. Bonner now does. They strongly urged him to join them and spend the remaining time in prayer. But he was either better read or more observant than they and refused. After further urging he finally said, "Boys, when I see Venus start I'll come." He had evidently noticed that the fixed stars and planets were all in their proper places.

THE DROUGHT OF 1845

Once a century is sufficiently frequent for such a condition as existed in 1845, "the year of the great dry spell." For many weeks no rain fell; streams became dry; crops were ruined; pastures left bare as the road. At first, the farmers thought such a condition could not long continue. They daily drove their cattle long distances for water or hauled water to them. Later many herds were driven to the southern part of the state where they remained until relief came. As the condition began to become serious only the least valuable of the herds were disposed of, but later animals valued at $80.00 or thereabouts were sold for $5.00. Had it not been for the many good springs with which Twinsburg is abundantly favored much more suffering would have resulted.

THE FLOOD OF 1913

So recent was this occurrence that it seems little an event of a past century. The fact that the township has a considerable elevation makes the matter less worthy of mention from the point of damage suffered. On Easter Sunday, March, 1913, a gentle rain began to fall. This rain continued, increasingly heavy, for three days. Of course, like all other streams, Tinker creek overflowed her banks. The W. & L. E. railroad, like nearly all other railroads in Ohio, suspended operations for a time. Much inconvenience was experienced, and some damage done along the creek; culverts were washed out, cellars flooded, fences carried away. But when Twinsburg's condition was compared with that of many other towns in Ohio her people felt they might well be thankful for an uncommonly fortunate place of habitation.

THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD

In general, the Western Reserve inclined very strongly toward the abolition of slavery in those stormy years preceding the Civil War. Hudson was the boyhood home of John Brown and, at a later time, he gathered and stored some of the "sinews of war" within the confines of Summit Co. But the fact that Twinsburg's public school building was torn down by the Loco-focos because it was being used for anti-slavery meetings shows plainly that the friends of abolition did not have all things to their own liking. For many years previous to the war politics seethed with accusations and recriminations. That the escaping slaves had many friends here was well known, and that a branch of the underground railroad was operated through Twinsburg was an open secret. Probably slaves were sometimes secreted in Twinsburg but commonly Twinsburg's activity was expressed by the zeal of some of her citizens in conveying the refugees from Hudson, or elsewhere, to points north of town. Some of the citizens were subjected to suspicion because of their well-known attitude favoring putting right above an unjust law, and in later years there were mild rumors to the effect that some men, never suspected of complicity in the business, were really very efficient servants of down-trodden humanity. It is a sad time in a nation's history when men feel they cannot rightly obey the country's laws; but when war raised its ugly head Twinsburg showed her love of country was sincere and earnest.

THE GREAT SLEIGH RIDE OF 1856

The unusually good and long continued sleighing in the winter of 1855-56 led to many local sleighing parties. Considerable neighborly rivalry was stimulated and this led to a series of contests among neighboring townships. A rude flag, ridiculously embellished, soon became a prized possession. Solon, the first town to gain the flag, was deprived of it by Twinsburg, the first town in Summit Co. to win it. This victory required sixteen four-horse teams of Twinsburg. The flag was successively won by Bedford, Brecksville, Royalton, Boston, Independence, Hudson and finally Richfield with seventy-three four-horse teams. The excitement had become so intense and widespread that it was determined to make a final, tri-county contest. This was held March 15, 1856, Summit county winning with one hundred and sixty-two four and six-horse teams. A few days later Medina county sent one hundred and eighty-two similar teams to Akron. They took the flag with them back to Medina county, but through a veritable sea of mud. A string of bells used during this contest may, during the sleighing season, still be heard merrily jingling along the Macedonia road.

CEMETERIES

A matter usually ignored until necessity compels attention is that of a proper place of burial. For several years after the settlement of Twinsburg burials were made on the farms. But such an arrangement was far from satisfactory, and did not appeal to a people of New England birth and training. Accordingly the township bought an acre of land northeast of the square for a public burying ground. The first burial made there was that of Lucretia Hull who died September 9, 1823. This burying ground sufficed until in the middle forties. In the winter of 1845-6 there was some agitation regarding a new cemetery but no action was taken by the town.

Mr. Ethan Alling was convinced that a different arrangement was timely, and accordingly purchased of Park B. Clark and others one and a half acres of land a short distance southwest of the public square. After grading, fencing, and allotting, he planted locust trees. June 1, 1846, he offered at public sale the lots of Locust Grove cemetery for from three to six dollars per lot. But few lots were ever bought until necessity arose for their use.

At first Mr. Alling proposed to give lots to those who were unable to purchase a place for burying their dead, but becoming convinced the privilege was abused he substituted the plan of selling a single grave, letting the town bear the expense. In 1855 he proposed selling one quarter of the ground to the town for such a purpose but the voters rejected the plan.

In 1860 a new fence became an imperative necessity, and it was thought stone would be both cheaper and more durable than iron. The owners of lots in the cemetery were asked to state what they would contribute toward the expense that would be incurred in building a fence according to the following specifications: "Fence to contain four courses of stone, and to be 5 ft. 6 in. high, including underpinning, to-wit: 1st, or foundation stone, 2 ft. square; 2d course 18 in. bed and 16 in. thick; 3d course 15 in. bed and 14 in. thick; 4th course 12 in. bed and 12 in. thick. Should enough be subscribed the work will be done the coming season. Surplus funds, if any, accounted for. No fence, no pay. Signed, Ethan Alling."

Subscriptions amounting to $1140 were secured and the work was commenced the last day of March. The entire work was completed by November 17, 1860, at "a cost of $1,079.66." A strip of land 3 ft. wide was bought upon which to build the fence, bringing the cost of the improvements, including road and repairs, to $1850.

The first burial, July 5, 1846, in Locust Grove Cemetery was that of James Henri, the oldest man in town at the time of his death, he being 83 years of age. By December 31, 1860, there had been 221 interments. There were 318 deaths in Twinsburg from July, 1841, till December 31, 1860, of whom 108 were under 5 years, 9 over 80 years, and one over 90 years. Of the 221 who were buried in Locust Grove Cemetery by 1860 we know the causes of deaths of about one-half. Of these 34 died of consumption, 26 of old age, 5 of dropsy, 4 of typhus fever, 3 of heart disease, 2 of cancer, and one of smallpox.

In 1870 Mr. Lewis Alling deeded the driveway to the township, and in 1889 the town acquired possession of the cemetery, Mr. S. H. Lane, Mr. C. B. Lane, and William Rudd being the township trustees. By 1903 the cemetery had become so crowded that the town, M. Roniger, C. E. Riley, and W. C. Prentiss being trustees, bought a strip of land to the south containing one acre. Soon after the town came into possession of the roadway, land to the east of it was purchased and in 1872 the vault built thereon.

More recently the driveway was made wider and otherwise improved. The beautiful hard-head work at the entrance was done in 1907, the late Gardner Parmelee having the contract for the work.

Twinsburg takes pride in a well-kept resting place for those who are done with life's toil. Many are brought here from other places for burial. To them, in death as well as in years long gone, Twinsburg is home.

DEVELOPMENTS OF RECENT YEARS

W. S. LISTER

It was the writer's privilege to come into the life and affairs of Twinsburg in the spring of 1908. There was little to suggest the former activity and glory of the town. The "Founders" had all gone, and their prowess and many other sterling qualities were but memories to the remaining few who remembered them. The Bissell Institute and the towering figure of its proprietor were no more, and the thrill which the presence of the students of this school gave to the town was no longer felt.

According to accounts of the town's activities in its earlier history, there was much that reminds one of rural life as it was made to appear by poets and fiction writers of a generation or two gone by. If the halo and charm attaching to country life, as depicted in story books, ever had any justification in fact, this justification was furnished in the life actually lived in Twinsburg between the years 1830 and 1870. But from about 1870 on the currents of life moved too swiftly for communities like Twinsburg, that were near large cities. They couldn't even stand still without becoming a sort of backwater. Stagnation became inevitable.

It was characteristic of such communities, after having passed through the period between 1870 and 1900, that the population was predominantly composed of the aged and the middle aged. Few young men were to be found. When they reached early manhood or even advanced boyhood, they sought the larger spheres of life in which to work out their destinies. This flight by the young men caused a like movement among the girls or left them behind to face spinsterhood.

Twinsburg, in 1908, showed marked effects of this hegira of young men and young women.

The town, however, was quite ready to make emergence from its quiescence of several decades, as is attested by the rapidity with which it moved to effect its transformation. It is difficult to go back in memory, even so short a time, and reconstruct conditions as they existed in 1908, and it is not essential; but as the writer has been requested to tell the story of Twinsburg's later development, it may be proper to set out here, and with approximate order, some of the principal things that have come to pass in that time:

1. An unified telephone service, with local capital and local exchanges.
2. A library providing free books and magazines, and a reading room.
3. A centralized school, in place of the old sub-district plan.
4. A water system, serving almost every householder, in and about the center, so organized as to be a community utility.
5. A bank, with purely local capital, directed by responsible citizens, and devoted to the interests of the community.
6. Pavement completed from Akron to Cleveland, inauguration of bus service, reproducing the stage-coach lines of the early days.
7. Electric light and power service, making possible street and house lighting, and bringing to everyone within the limit of the service lines the possibility of affecting many labor-saving conveniences at slight cost.

To attempt a full statement of the facts surrounding the accomplishment of each of the above enumerated improvements, would require the space of this entire volume. The principal facts are within the knowledge of many, though there are some misconceptions in the minds of the people of the community generally with regard to some of them. For the benefit of future generations, and in order that there may be available to every one an exact statement of facts, which can be verified by documentary and living witnesses, the following brief summary is deemed to be justified:

THE HUDSON TELEPHONE COMPANY

Mr. James W. Ellsworth, under date of October 20, 1907, made a proposition to the village of Hudson, whereby, under certain conditions, he offered to provide said village with sewer and water systems, and with an electric lighting plant, the principal condition attaching to said offer being the removal from the streets of said village of all overhead wires. This offer was duly accepted by ordinance of the council of said village passed on the tenth day of December, 1907, and negotiations were opened with the Central Union Telephone Company, operating the Bell lines, and the Akron People's Telephone Company, operating the independent lines, with a view to having their wires placed in underground conduits. The village representatives and the said Telephone Companies were unable to agree. A boycott of the Telephone Companies was attempted, but accomplished nothing that was helpful. It was the cause, however, of the service being greatly neglected.

In the summer of 1909 the writer approached Mr. W. C. Wood, the present manager of the above company, a practical telephone man, and, together with him, worked out a plan for meeting the situation. This plan involved the formation of The Hudson Telephone Company, the purchase by it of the Bell and independent properties, and compliance with the requirements of Mr. Ellsworth's proposition. It further involved the raising of $25,000.00 of capital, through the co-operation of some of Hudson's public spirited citizens. It required more than a year's time in which to consummate the transaction, owing largely to the fact that Mr. Ellsworth was in Europe and some of the proposals had to be sent to him for approval.

Not since the installation of the telephone in Twinsburg in 1882 has the town been without telephone service, but, in many particulars, the results were only indifferently satisfactory. Some of the difficulties encountered are indicated by the fact that immediately previous to consolidation there were sixty instruments operated under the Bell system and seventeen under that of the Akron People's.

The result of this accomplishment gives Twinsburg, as well as Hudson, a telephone service that is equal to the best, having available to each of her one hundred and twenty-six subscribers, through one instrument, connection with every telephone user in the country. It also gave Twinsburg a local switchboard, which brings it into closer touch in case of trouble, and tends to facilitate the service.

THE SAMUEL BISSELL MEMORIAL LIBRARY ASSOCIATION

The above institution was brought into existence following a number of meetings, held in the fall of 1909 and the winter of 1910, to consider the needs of the community. A committee was appointed to make a survey and report. This committee comprised the following: Rev. Alfred Walls, Rev. W. R. Blackmer, A. W. Elliott, L. G. Bean and W. S. Lister. The report of this committee, recommending "that a library association be formed, and that arrangements be perfected for housing a library in connection with one or other of the places at present open to the public," was approved.

The association was formed at a meeting held at the Congregational Church in the spring of 1910, and the following officers were chosen: President, W. S. Lister, Vice-President, E. A. Parmelee, Secretary, A. W. Elliott, Treasurer, L. G. Bean, Librarian, Rev. W. R. Blackmer.

More than one hundred people joined in making up a fund in excess of $600.00, which fund was used in equipping and furnishing a room in the building of Mrs. Amanda Tucker, and on May 7, 1910, the Library was formally opened. Miss Mary E. Downey, then state library organizer, was present at the opening, and spoke.

For a short time a charge was made for the issuance of books but, by arrangement with the township trustees and the board of education, this was dispensed with, and levy is now made by the trustees for maintenance, and the board of education makes contributions for the purchase and repair of books.

The library is in great need, however, of assistance, outside of the help it receives from the taxing authorities, and it is to be hoped that some of the citizens will find it in their hearts to make provision for it by will or otherwise.

There are 2475 volumes on the shelves of the library, of which 900 are fiction. There are seventeen magazines constantly available on the tables. The library room is open from eight a. m. to eight p. m., and is well patronized and fully appreciated.

The present officers are as follows: President, W. S. Lister; Vice-President, Ray Bissell; Secretary, Miss Edna Chambers; Treasurer, A. R. Mountjoy; Librarian, Miss Lena M. Carter.

Annually, on the 22nd day of February, the Association meets to hear reports of officers, and to elect new officers.

To these meetings all the families resident in the township are invited, and the adult members thereof present at such meetings are entitled to vote. A dinner is served by the ladies of one or other of the churches. Good music is provided, and usually a speaker from outside the township. The attendance at these meetings has seldom been fewer than one hundred.

THE CENTRALIZED SCHOOL

This change was brought about in the year 1910, through the fact that the small sub-district school buildings were generally in poor condition, and changes were required to be made in the center building owing to the action of the State in condemning the same, because of improper or insufficient means for heating and ventilation.

The Board of Education at that time had the following membership:

P. P. Evans, Dr. R. B. Chamberlin, O. H. Bennett, Frank K. Doubrava and Mrs. W. S. Lister. The Board recommended centralization on the ground that it would render unnecessary further expenditures on the small outlying buildings, would justify a greater outlay for the center building, and was in line with progressive ideas obtaining generally.

Following a mass meeting held in the town hall at which both sides were presented, and much feeling manifested, the question was submitted to the voters on June 4, 1910. The result showed about two-thirds of the electors voting favoring centralization and about one-third thereof opposing it.

Accordingly, the center building was reconstructed to care for all the children of the township, except those from the Dell District, which, by consent of all parties was left out of the centralization scheme, and in September of 1910 the school opened under the new arrangement.

In consequence of centralization it soon became apparent that the school grounds were entirely inadequate. An opportunity offered for acquiring a little over five acres of land between the school building and Tinker's Creek, but the Board of Education was not in funds to take advantage of it. Upon learning of this situation, Mr. C. E. Riley, Mr.

C. B. Lane and Mr. O. H. Bennett offered to purchase the said land and hold it for a reasonable time for the benefit of the schools, and with the right in the Board of Education to acquire the property at any time for the sum of $800.00 (the purchase price), with the understanding that interest on this sum and the taxes would be paid, for the use of the land. In accordance with this arrangement the property has ever since been held in the name of C. E. Riley, trustee, for the above purpose. It is to be hoped that the time will soon come when these public spirited men may be relieved of this burden.

THE WILCOXTON WATER COMPANY

Twinsburg people for many years boasted of its ledges, and of the springs issuing therefrom, but few communities were so poorly supplied with water conveniences until the completion of the present system in the fall of 1912. This lack caused the writer, soon after his settlement in Twinsburg, to canvas the springs of the neighborhood for a source of supply that might be available for use and justify development. This canvas established the conviction that the spring now used is the best single source of supply, as the flow is fairly constant throughout the year, the water is reasonably soft and the elevation above the center about 80 feet.

The chief difficulty was, of course, financial. After consideration of various possible methods of procedure, the writer decided to lay before Mrs. Celestia E. Wilcox, the owner of the above spring, the entire matter of furnishing the town with a water system. Mrs. Wilcox's response, after full consideration, was most generous. She accepted without qualification the method outlined, and signed the following proposal which was submitted to her:

"Twinsburg, Ohio, Oct. 4, 1911.

Mr. W. S. Lister,
Twinsburg, Ohio.

Dear Sir:

Following our several conversations, I hereby offer and agree upon the formation of a corporation (hereinafter referred to as the "Water Company") by April 1, 1912, with a subscribed capital of not less than $2,000.00, having for its purpose the supplying of water to the people in and about the center of Twinsburg Township, Summit County, to grant and convey to such corporation a perpetual right in and to the water flowing from the large spring on the 70 acre tract of land owned by me, and situated on the East side of the highway leading from Twinsburg to Solon, upon the conditions and subject to the restrictions following, to-wit:

1. Sufficient water shall be left flowing from said spring to meet all requirements for watering farm animals in pasture on said 70 acres of land.

2. Water shall be furnished to the dwelling houses now on said 70 acre tract and on the 10 acre tract now owned by me on the West side of the highway opposite said 70 acre tract and the watering trough in front thereof, in sufficient quantities for all domestic purposes, but not less than is now flowing at said places.

3. The water taken from said spring shall be delivered and kept continually available for use at the Public Square and School House lot at said Twinsburg Center.

4. As a condition precedent to the making of said grant and conveyance, the Board of Trustees and the Board of Education of said Township shall, respectively, by resolution, agree to provide and furnish, within one year from the date of said grant and conveyance, suitable drinking fountains at said locations.

5. So much of the water as is not required for the purposes aforesaid, may be used by the people living in and about said Center upon such terms and conditions and subject to such rules, regulations and restrictions as may be fixed and imposed by said Water Company.

6. Said grant and conveyance shall carry with it the right to said Water Company at any time to enter upon so much of said 70 acre tract as may be necessary to properly improve, safeguard and protect said spring, and to build and construct suitable reservoirs and housings, to lay and maintain water pipe lines from said spring to the said highway and to do all things incident thereto—provided that, in the laying of such pipe lines, the same shall be placed at such depth as will not interfere with cultivation of the land.

7. Said grant and conveyance shall also contain a provision that, upon the incorporation of the territory in and about said Center into a village, such village shall at any time have the right to acquire, take over and enjoy all the rights in said spring passing under said grant and all property of said Water Company, upon paying to such Water Company a sum equal to the value of all the property and improvements then owned by said Water Company, exclusive of the rights in said spring, and an agreement on the part of said village to furnish water to all persons then receiving water from said Water Company at the same rentals as will be charged by such village generally for like service.

(SIGNED) Celestia E. Wilcox."

Immediately this offer was signed, a survey was made and an estimate formed of the requirements for development, both from a financial as well as physical standpoint. In this matter the engineering ability and services of Mr. P. P. Evans were of great value.

Considerable time and effort were required to secure the funds necessary, but this was ultimately accomplished, and on April 29, 1912, the above Company was incorporated, and the work of construction undertaken.

By the terms of the Articles of Incorporation, among other things it is provided:

“The purpose for which said corporation is formed is to meet the conditions of a gift of Celestia E. Wilcox of Twinsburg Township, Summit County, Ohio, under date of October 4, 1911;” (set forth above); “and for the purpose of doing only such things as are necessary or incidental to meet and carry out the purpose of said gift, with power to make regulations for the government of said corporation, and to make and enforce terms, rules and conditions for the use of said water—said terms, rules and conditions to be such as to enable said corporation to be self-sustaining, to make repayment to its stockholders of its paid up capital and the payment of any indebtedness incurred by it—but the utilities of said corporation shall not be operated for profit, nor shall any officer, director or stockholder at any time receive any compensation or profit from said corporation or from the operation of said utilities.”

The Company has a capitalization of $5000.00, and issued bonds for a like aggregate sum. A share of stock was issued to the purchaser of each bond of $100.00, and an effort was made to limit the individual holdings of stock by giving the bonds the widest possible distribution throughout the township and among the friends of the town. It is to be hoped that these shares will remain so far as possible with the original investors until the system can be taken over by the community when it shall be organized into a village. No good can result from the concentration of this stock in the hands of a few, and the people who are enjoying the benefits of this convenience should jealously guard and keep their shares of stock in order that they may have part in the management and direction of the business, and assist in safeguarding, the interests of the water users who, after all, are the real parties in interest.

More recently the Company has acquired the tract on which the spring and reservoir are situated, with a view of protecting the environs thereof, and will retain sufficient land to make the source of the town's water secure against possible invasion or contamination.

The Board of Directors of the Company at present comprises the following: C. B. Lane, C. E. Riley, A. W. Elliott, E. B. Crouse, C. F. Crouse, P. P. Evans, S. H. Crankshaw, R. B. Chamberlin and W. S. Lister.

Its officers are:

President, W. S. Lister; Vice President, C. F. Crouse; Treasurer, P. P. Evans; Secretary, A. W. Elliott; Superintendent, S. H. Crankshaw.

THE TWINSBURG BANKING COMPANY

To all appearances a more quixotic performance would be difficult to imagine than the actual methods adopted and pursued by Mr. E. O. Christy in the promotion and organization of the above bank. He came to Twinsburg in the fall of 1911, without introduction of any sort, and was a stranger to practically everyone in the town. He immediately announced in the stores, and to persons he met casually, that he had come to organize a bank, and then proceeded to set forth the advantage of such an institution and the methods he had used in other places and proposed to follow in Twinsburg. The people at first smiled as they listened, thinking that the explanation lay in a weak or overwrought mentality. Among themselves they joked about the matter, but very few took any serious interest in the man or the subject.

After a sojourn in the town of several weeks, and without having asked or received any assurances, Mr. Christy left Twinsburg and went to Chicago to spend the winter. He returned, however, in the fore part of April following and immediately took up the agitation for a bank, and continued without cessation until the full capital was subscribed, the organization effected, and the building nearly constructed and equipped.

He was not robust in health during any of his stay in Twinsburg, and much of his work was done under conditions that suggested hospital care, but by sheer will power he held himself to the task he had set himself and could not see the work neglected. In mid-summer of 1912, however, he succumbed to his illness and was taken to St. Luke's Hospital, Cleveland, where in September, 1912, he died.

The bank was formally opened on November 11, 1912, and has proven itself a great convenience to the community. It has a capital of $25,000.00 and its deposits at present aggregate $129,402.04. Its surplus and undivided profits total $3,728.55. Its present Board of Directors comprises the following: O. H. Bennett, G. L. Bishop, H. A. Cochran, C. H. Craemer, W. H. Chamberlin, P. P. Evans, V. R. Hempstead, A. R. Mountjoy, C. E. Riley.

Its officers are as follows: President, C. E. Riley, Vice President, G. L. Bishop, Secretary, A. J. Brown, Treasurer, O. H. Bennett, Cashier, A. R. Mountjoy.

ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER SERVICE

Unsuccessful efforts were made by Twinsburg people in 1912 and 1913 to obtain light and power service from The Northern Ohio Traction and Light Company. But in the winter of 1914-1915 the late Mr. Will Christy, vice president of the company, became interested in the efforts then being made to secure better lighting conditions, and through his intercessions and kindly interest, a proposition was made by the company to extend its service lines so as to furnish street and residence lighting, and power, on a basis involving the purchase of preferred stock of the above company sufficient to cover the cost ($7500.00) of the entire installation. The work of meeting the above requirements was left to the following committees: W. S. Lister, Chas. F. Crouse, P. P. Evans, A. W. Elliott, Edward Wilson, H. C. Gillie, A. N. Roach and E. J. McCreery. A lighting district was established by petition to the township trustees, and provision made for the location of twenty-four street lights at an expense of $18.00 per light per annum, to be covered by a levy upon the taxable property within the district. The purchase of the aforementioned stock was accomplished and all expenses of the proceedings had by the committee were covered through the co-operation of a number of public-spirited citizens, whose names are entitled to mention. They are as follows:

AKRON-CLEVELAND PAVEMENT

This improvement, now just completed, was commenced in the spring of 1911. It had the active support of the then acting county commissioners and of the trustees of the townships through which it runs. It today constitutes one of the main arteries for public travel in northern Ohio, and brings Twinsburg into daily touch with many people from all parts of the country.

The establishment in recent months of passenger bus services between Hudson and Cleveland is a substantial aid to the community. This service will doubtless be improved and elaborated as the traffic increases.

Nothing has contributed more to the transformation of the town than the brick pavement, although it has brought with it problems that are new and serious. These problems grow out of the speed, reckless driving and vast number of automobiles upon the highway. Life and limb are put in great jeopardy, and unless there is soon provided by the State or County an adequate force of highway constabulary to check and control this immense traffic, the toll of killed and injured now so frightful will not be lessened.

THE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

W. S. LISTER

The observance of anniversary periods in connection with any happening or event is an evidence of interest in and admiration for the thing done and the chief actors involved. Fifty years ago, and in the semi-centennial year of 1867, the citizens were moved to make fitting commemoration of the township's settlement, and at the same time to honor the brave Union soldiers, who in response to their country's call had gone out from the township—some never to return, through the erection of the substantial monument now standing in the park.

As the centennial year of 1917 approached, there was generally manifest among the people of the township the feeling that there should be fitting celebration of the event. On New Year's Day of 1916 more than one hundred and fifty people sat down to a community dinner in the Congregational Church and listened to discussions as to possible methods of celebration, means for making the celebration of greatest possible good to the community, and the scheme of organization best adapted to the purpose. At this dinner Mr W. S. Lister was toastmaster and the following responded to toasts, all bearing on the centennial: Dr. L. G. Griste, Mr. Daniel R. Taylor, Mr. Reuben Hitchcock, Professor E. S. Kerr, Mr. C. B. Lane and Miss Lena M. Carter. Mr. Taylor, who had left the township as a boy of twelve years, was somewhat reminiscent. He said in part:

“I have always felt a deep affection for this good old town, for here my grandfather, Daniel Richardson (for whom I was named) and his family came in 1824, located on the Cleveland Road, one-half mile west of here, and with his stalwart sons developed a farm. Two of his sons, Edwin and William, were for a time merchants in the village. Daniel W. Richardson, another son, remained upon the old farm (part of which is now owned by your worthy and enterprising citizen, Mr. W. S. Lister) until about 1866. Some of the older ones of you will remember him as an active, independent and progressive farmer, and a thoroughly good citizen, who, if he were here today, would enter into the spirit of this meeting with great zest. Here many of the family are buried in your beautiful cemetery. Here my father, Royal Taylor, lived for a number of years and married my mother, Sarah Ann Richardson. Here I was born, in the Huldah Wilcox home at the northeast corner of the square and Solon Road. Here I attended for a time Rev. Samuel Bissell's academy. In Tinker's Creek I learned to swim and fish. My first lessons in horsemanship were with my grandfather's old gray mare 'Tib.'

"The settlers of the Western Reserve were the sturdy sons and daughters of New England. No better ever settled a new country. Their industry, prudence, intelligence and moral worth should be historically preserved. Why not commence by holding a meritorious centennial celebration?"

All the speakers heartily favored giving the celebration real character and making it fittingly commemorative, and those present unanimously gave this sentiment their endorsement and authorized the appointment of a committee of twenty-five with full power to act. This committee comprises the following:

|------------------------|--------------------|
| Mr. O. H. Bennett | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Miss Ellen Bissell | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mr. W. H. Boose | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Miss Lena Carter | Macedonia, Ohio |
| Dr. R. B. Chamberlin | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mrs. L. K. Chamberlin | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mrs. Ella Cochran | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mrs. S. H. Crankshaw | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mrs. E. B. Crouse | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mr. M. E. Culham | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mr. A. W. Elliott | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mr. P. P. Evans | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mr. W. H. Gillie | Cleveland, Ohio |
| Mr. John Gould | Aurora, Ohio |
| Dr. L. G. Griste | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mrs. Kate Hanchett | Cleveland, Ohio |
| Dr. H. J. Herrick | Hudson, Ohio |
| Mr. Lawrence Hitchcock | Cleveland, Ohio |
| Mr. W. S. Lister | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mr. C. E. Riley | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mrs. Anna Straight | South Euclid, Ohio |
| Mrs. Allah Rudgers | Akron, Ohio |
| Mrs. Ethel Twerell | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mr. Ranson Tyson | Twinsburg, Ohio |
| Mrs. C. J. Wagner | Twinsburg, Ohio |

The committee immediately organized by electing the following officers: President, Mr. W. S. Lister, Vice-President, Mr. C. E. Riley, Secretary, Miss Ellen Bissell, Treasurer, Mr. P. P. Evans. Mr. C. B. Lane, though not a member of the committee, was elected Honorary President. An Executive Committee was named comprising the above officers and in addition Dr. H. J. Herrick, Dr. R. B. Chamberlin and Mrs. C. J. Wagner.

It was decided by the full committee, after thorough deliberation, to hold the centennial celebration August fifth to eleventh inclusive. The fifth, being Sunday, will be known as "Devotional Day" and will have appropriate exercises. The next three days will be taken up with receptions, family reunions and gatherings which will be of interest to the different groups. During the last three days there will be celebrations of a public nature. The committee has been assured of the co-operation of the Twinsburg Band which will greatly help to enliven the events of the entire week. An Athletic Association has been formed to develop and conduct all manner of sports and field events.

The production of a pageant has been decided upon and Miss S. Gertrude Hadlow of Cleveland has been made Pageant Master and will have entire direction of the affair.

THE PAGEANT OF TWINSBURG

BY MISS S. GERTRUDE HADLOW

No method of celebrating the anniversary of a town seems more fitting or gives more permanent satisfaction than the presentation of a pageant.

There is every reason why this should be true. For, a pageant is the history of the town presented dramatically in the open fields and sunshine, by the co-operative effort of the townspeople.

Local pride and patriotism are quickened by seeing enacted the heroic past, out of which the present has come.

Pageants not only give communities a wide advertisement but they teach the valuable lesson of co-operation and common endeavor. For, when such an undertaking is once carried through, there remains a spirit of unity, which is the greatest strength of any institution or community.

Mr. Louis N. Parker, "the father of modern pageantry," speaks of the pageant as being "the representation of the history of a town, in dramatic form, from the earliest period to some later point. This is set forth in verse and prose of the most direct sort, and is embellished with choruses, songs, dances, marches, and every legitimate spectacular adjunct. It is acted in some beautiful and historical spot. It is acted by the citizens of the town themselves, their wives, their children, and their friends. It is acted in a spirit of simplicity and reverence, and the audience must bring the same spirit in watching its progress. It is not a stage-play. It is a lofty and dignified panorama of the town's history. And it is an act of local patriotism. And out of local patriotism grows that wider patriotism which binds the people of one country together. But it is more still. I confess I cannot conceive a pageant except as an incident in a great act of praise and thanksgiving."

The "episodes" in the Pageant of Twinsburg will be scenes of importance in the past of the town. The "episodes" will be linked together by "interludes"—music, dancing or singing—which will suggest the nature of the scene which is to follow.

In a general way the Pageant of Twinsburg will follow the outline suggested below:

Struggles of our ancestors with the savages.

EPISODE 2

1. An incident of settlement.
2. The naming of the township.

1. An incident showing the influence and character of Samuel Bissell.
2. An exhibition or activity of the Bissell Institute.

EPISODE 4

1. The Underground Railroad.
2. The departure of troops for the Civil War.

EPISODE 5

1. Fair day at Twinsburg, of the Union Fair Association.

1. Dedication by the "Spirit of Twinsburg" of all past history (all performers in all episodes) to "the Spirit of America."

It is customary to close a pageant with the singing of the Star-Spangled Banner by the whole cast and the audience—the latter, of course, on their feet. A patriotic air, sung with respectful fervor, brings home to the people the underlying patriotism of the whole performance, and sends them away in an exalted state of mind.

CONCLUSION

A hundred years is a long, long time. While it has not been always easy to go back a century and untangle the threads of fact and fancy it has been less difficult than it would have been for our ancestors to foresee the Twinsburg of 1917. To most of them the town would be a source of satisfaction. It is possible that in some particulars it might be a disappointment to a few. It might be a puzzle to others, but to all it would be an astonishment. A hundred years ago no one could anticipate the nation-wide developments that would determine along what lines community life should progress.

Doubtless the pioneers cherished their dreams as to the future of the town they were building and we know they were alert to seize opportunities to promote its growth and development. To their credit, and our benefit, they wisely left future details to be attended to in seasonable time by those who would be conversant with conditions then existing. But for the future they laid a broad and sure foundation in their industry, thrift, self-sacrifice, reasonable independence and reverence for education and religion. And these fundamental virtues have survived till this day in the character of the townspeople.

It is a long, long way from the old log cabin to the present commodious homes; from the candle to the electric light; from homespun to present day fabrics; from ox-cart to automobile; from the old well-sweep to the turning of a faucet; from the old blue teacup to the present bank; from the old log schoolhouse to the building accommodating two hundred and twenty-five pupils; from an upper room in a gristmill to the present comfortable church edifices; from the mud turnpike to the brick pavement; from the infrequent weekly newspaper to the public reading-room, library and R. F. D.; from isolation to the telephone; from real estate, with improved land selling at $7.50 per acre, to the present 15398 acres valued at $782,-220.00; from personal belongings carried in a pack to the present $727,460 worth of personal property; from the little settlement at Millsville to the present population of 829.

To this progress the early settlers and succeeding generations have all generously contributed.

In the preceding pages an effort has been made to give due honor to the founders of the town; to portray the hardships they encountered and the spirit that enabled them to wrest success from difficulties; to bestow proper gratitude upon those citizens who, through the century, have striven to better their community; to bring to the present generation a keener realization of the noble past to which they are heirs; to give to future generations, as their right, some knowledge of the past that they may be inspired toward further achievement.

Nothing has so heavily contributed to the realization that the historian's task has been inadequately performed as the fact that such incomplete mention has been made of the large number of townspeople to whom so much of credit and praise is justly due. Throughout her existence Twinsburg has always had a large majority of citizens who went about performing every task with fidelity, demanding little for themselves, giving freely of themselves and their substance whenever need was known, quietly bearing their full share of life's burdens. The heart grows warm and tender toward these unobtrusive, faithful folk.

That the future will bring changes all know; what the changes will be none know. The past is gone: its fruits remain. The present is with us, and with it is promise of rich fruitage. That the future century may be replete with those things that make for ideal community life is the burden of the heart of Twinsburg in the year 1917.

TWINSBURG

The Story of a Hundred Years

A CENTENNIAL POEM

BY

The Pilgrims found a landing place upon New England's shore—
And planted there a hardy race where pines and wild waves roar;
Then, as the fleeting years swept by, there drifted o'er the land
Descendants of that company, and—here today we stand.

As children of that sturdy race whose lineage we claim,
We aim to make this rural place ideal in fact and name—
To foster here where maples thrive in every verdant grove,
Each home and school, each church and shrine, for which our Fathers strove.

From the log cabin in the wild beside the wooded stream,
To modern telephone and bank, seems like a wondrous dream;
The avenue and paved street were once the wildwood trail;
Sidewalks for the hurrying feet—and route of rural mail.

Where once the stage-coach rolled along o'er ways of corduroy, Adown the woodlands dark and long, the auto' whizzes by;
Where once the hour-glass ran its course in grains of yellow sands,
A town clock now with measured force ticks on—with gilded hands.

Where once the rustic farmer swung keen cradle thro' the grain,
The busy reaper's arm is flung athwart the teeming main;
Where once the busy spinning-wheel drew out the slender thread,
The vacuum cleaner stands today, or sewing-machine instead.

By steam we thresh the golden grain which forms our daily bread;
The clumsy flail is rent in twain, its blistering glory fled;
The roller mill has thrust away the mortar's odious name;
The tallow candle burns today in the electric flame.

'Twas here the wily Blackbird chief led dusky warriors 'round
From yonder steep and tangled ledge to primal hunting ground.
'Twas here, one century ago our fathers set their seal,
Where flowers bloom and waters flow all for the common-weal.

Upon our east, in majesty arose Fort Lauren's walls;
And west, in sweet serenity, the proud Cuyahoga falls;
O, transformation marvellous! Where death and danger roam,
A wild unbroken wilderness—a land of pleasant homes!

One hundred summer suns have gone o'er these green fields of ours;
One hundred seasons have put forth their wealth of fruits and flowers;

And full one hundred patriot sons braved fields of murderous flame,
And here upon enduring stone is carved each honored name.

Lyceum Hall is silent now, its glorious work is done;
A central high school crowns the brow of yon hill sloping down;
Across the way there stands enshrined a memory and a name—
All honor to that grand good man* directing youth to fame.

Along the shady avenue the white-walled temples rise,
Erected when the town was new, and pointing to the skies;
Within those courts are lessons taught, and hymns and words of prayer
And yearning hearts thro' grace have sought and found God everywhere.

And here, in one great brotherhood of Compass and of Square,
Are principles of fellowship in which its members share;
Their history is woven into fabric of the town
Along with many other things that give the place renown.

The crimson tide of rum and crime, of misery and of shame,
Was staunched, we trust, forever more, when the White Ribbons came;
Like a fair wave of golden light upon a darkened shore,
Their ensign white, a beacon bright, goes ever on before.

And there upon the Locust Hill the Marble City lies,
Built up by cruel dart of time, and hallowed memories;
The pine trees guard each silent home in solemn quietness benign,
And every monumental stone is memory's treasured shrine.

And here we pause, to honor those who gave the splendid park
To generations yet to come—should it not bear a mark
In memory of those brothers twain, allied in life, in death the same?
With us their ashes yet remain, and lingers still the noble name.

Our pleasant river, much the same, with curves of winding shore,
And ledges, by the loom of time, their scenic garments wore;
From out their massive forms have come foundations firm, of stone,
And nature seals the ruins o'er with beauty of her own.

The pioneers now slumber in lowly beds of green,
Where flowerets without number grace each silent scene;
The new age now before us with blessings dropping down,
Be one great benediction—be Twinsburg's joy and crown!

*The Reverend Samuel Bissell, founder of education in Twinsburg.

A hundred noble years have gone within the scroll-writ Past;
Adown the winding path of time the withered flowers are cast;
Back o'er the mountains, hills and dells, to many a worthy state,
Run golden threads which bind us all to achievement and to fate.

The village stores still take their gain as in the years gone by;
The same old marts, tho' changed in name, is where we sell and buy:
And those old tavern walls—could they but tell of long ago—
But they belong to another age, and time hath willed it so.

My great grandsire, with axe and chain and tripod, ran the lines
Of this fair township, which was then all clad in trees and vines.
My grandsire set the beauteous trees upon the "village green;"
As some have died, new ones have come to fill the ranks between.

The landmarks of the pioneers have mostly passed away;
They paid their tribute year by year, in building those today;
The cooper shops and scale-board works are gathered to the past,
Around each ruin memory lurks, and she is fading fast.

And Ledgsham's Mills and Parmelee's Falls have felt the tooth of Time,
And Loomis's Mills and the old plank road have fallen into line;
And other places I might name which Clio holds in trust,
Are gone at last to their repose, they slumber in the dust.

And where the trailing sandstone ledge of western slopes, let down
In pasture lots and timberlands on eastern side of town,
A path of serpentine and black winds out across the green,
It is the Wheeling Railway track whose smoky pall is seen.

In years gone by, a few lead pipes brought crystal waters down
From purling springs of purple hills to this New England town;
But later years hath wrought a change—those clear pure waters run
Thro' one continuous long straight main, to gladden every one.

The seed well sown in years gone by, by loving hearts and hands,
Along the rough and rugged way, today, in harvest stands;
And every gift has brought to us an increase o'er the last,
And blessings of most lasting worth, from struggles of the past.

The fathers wrought the best they knew—resigned their all to us—
May we to high ideals prove true and faithful to our trust;
Bequeathing to those yet to come, as years are handed down,
The priceless heritage of home and a progressive town!

PREFACE

UNDoubtedly this part of the book contains mistakes. Some of them may be the author's own, pure and simple. Others belong to those who furnished the facts, as the author can prove by referring to the filled blanks and letters, which he has preserved. He has detected and corrected a number of mistakes which people have made in dates concerning themselves and their families. Some are due to very poor or very blind writing of names and dates. Some have been unwittingly copied from other books and documents. Even grave stone inscriptions are not always accurate. Sometimes the death and burial dates are confused.

Some of the family records are very incomplete, lacking many names, dates and facts. We simply could not get them, especially in the case of people who lived here so long ago that no living person remembers them.

People who refused us information—there were very few such—even when we called at their homes, cannot complain if their family record is incomplete and incorrect. Even in such cases we have felt bound to give such facts as we could glean from others.

Some will say: "Why, I could have told him all about that family if he had asked me." But we did not know that you knew, and so we failed to get it.

If from the time the book is published until after the centennial celebration, the readers of the book will make a note of all mistakes and omissions and needed additions, and send them in, it is possible that we can print them in a supplement which can be given to the owners of books, or furnished at from ten to twenty-five cents. At any rate send in such mistakes, omissions, etc., as you discover, and mark them in your own copy of the book.

There are about eleven names in the history of Twinsburg that are represented by so many individuals and families that for convenience of reference we have prepared charts of them. They were neatly copied by Mr. Walter S. Dunscomb and then photographed and cuts made of them. When daughters marry and have children the names of those children come of course under the father's name.

In the case of several or many families of the same name, and in the case of children born in Twinsburg, we have not confined our record closely to township lines. The record will be far more valuable to the families themselves, and to their friends, if it includes names of children and grandchildren born elsewhere. But of course we could not carry such records too far. We could not prepare a complete genealogy of each family. In many cases we have carried the line in condensed form back to the first one of the family who came to America, or to one who was a Revolutionary soldier.

We have learned of some unpleasant facts in the history of some families, but have not felt called upon to record them. No murder, so far as known, has been committed in the township. Yet Rev. Samuel Bissell, in his record of deaths in the early thirties, says in parenthesis after the name of a certain woman: "Murdered by her husband." We have not told who that husband was. If the good Lord blots out our sins from his book we should be willing to do the same with the sins of our townsmen.

Neither have we told all the good traits and deeds. We would gladly have done so but there was not room enough. These are genealogical sketches, not biographical.

We have occasionally inserted little incidents that may seem trivial, but they all help to better understand the people and the times. Posterity has preserved such incidents and we will help pass them on.

The preparation of these sketches has been a long drawn out and a very tedious task, probably taking a year of solid work in the past three years. Yet the author has enjoyed it, partly because he believes in the fun of hard work, and the value to a man, as Booker Washington said, of having a hard job on hand, and partly because he has felt sure that he was doing a good and abiding work for the community. If the book is appreciated and used he has his reward. It is said on good authority that no township in Ohio has hitherto undertaken such a work as this. Twinsburg leads them all in the effort to preserve a record of all her families. We are glad to help in thus putting Twinsburg on the map. Much credit is due the Congregational Church for allowing its pastor to give so much of his time to this work.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

1. The people now living in Twinsburg, furnishing records of their own families and giving information about former families.
2. Elderly people, here and elsewhere, many of whom have been consulted, some of them many times.
3. Twinsburg people, or their children, living elsewhere. This has involved an extensive correspondence.
4. Church rolls and records. Those of the Congregational Church are quite complete, covering nearly one hundred years.
5. School registers, especially for Districts No. 7 and No. 2. It is a great pity that so many of those records have been destroyed.
6. Catalogs of the Twinsburg Institute.
7. The so-called Cemetery Book, published in 1860, with authentic early history of the town, by Ethan Alling and Luman Lane. Its list of heads of families here in 1860 is very valuable.
8. Histories of Summit (and Portage) counties, Lane's, Doyle's, Perrin's and Bowen's. Their biographical sketches of Twinsburg people we have referred to for further information about those people.
9. Atlas of Summit Co. in 1870, with map of village and township at that time.
10. Pioneer Women of the Western Reserve, especially Part 4.
11. The census of the township taken by Rev. Samuel Bissell in May, 1833, the original manuscript and a copy made by Charles Lane.
12. Family Genealogies, especially those of the Lane, Herrick, White and other families.
13. List of deaths and burials in Twinsburg since July, 1841, kept successively by Rhoda Green, Ethan Alling and Mrs. Willard C. Prentiss. Their list is chronological but has been of most use after being turned into an alphabetical list. It contains over 1000 names. It is very valuable in spite of many mistakes.

14. Inscriptions on cemetery monuments and tombstones.
15. Record of births and deaths kept by Rev. Samuel Bissell during his pastorates from 1828 to 1843.
16. Files of the Ohio Observer, published many years at Hudson. The Western Reserve Historical Society in Cleveland has the only complete file. Many books in that library have been consulted.

Lists of children are numbered, except when there are but few, or when the order of birth is not known.

As a rule children born elsewhere of Twinsburg born people are not given, unless they are in nearby towns or cities. Exceptions depend partly on whether the facts were furnished or not. All towns and cities mentioned without a state are in Ohio, except names of some well known cities, like N. Y. City, Chicago, etc., whose names are not duplicated in Ohio. Initials are not given when the full name is known. In a number of cases the middle initial does not stand for any name but is a name by itself. In such cases it should have no period after it, but we have not found it convenient to follow that rule.

Months are indicated by numerals: 8, 21, 1916 = August 21, 1916.
